Film Marketing

Second Edition

Finola Kerrigan

Film Marketing

The role of the film marketer is both vital and challenging. Promotion is one of the industry's biggest costs, with the campaign of a large film costing up to half its production budget. Box office results, however, are wildly unpredictable: relatively few films a year make a profit. These market conditions make this a unique industry and film marketing a specific and demanding skill set that requires attention early in the career of any marketing student looking to progress in the industry.

This new edition of Film Marketing is a thorough update of the first textbook in film promotion. Like in the first edition, Kerrigan takes a socio-cultural, as well as a business view, of film marketing and its impact, covering different approaches to promotion according to different aims and audiences internally and externally, and across the world. This book addresses all areas of film marketing from the rigorous perspective of someone with first-hand knowledge of the trade. This new edition also includes:

- Additional pedagogy and visual examples to reinforce key points
- A more international range of cases and coverage of non-Western markets to give a global overview of film marketing across the world
- New and expanded sections on social media, digital promotion, transmedia and crowdfunding

This is the original film marketing text which no engaged film or marketing student should be without.

Finola Kerrigan is Reader in Marketing and Consumption at Birmingham Business School, University of Birmingham.

Film Marketing is the only book you need on the subject. Kerrigan is a world class expert who understands both the historical, as well as the up-to-the-minute realities of marketing film. She presents the complex, ever-changing world of film with fluidity and great insight. It is a must-read for all producers, executives and students.

Gillian Gordon, Senior Lecturer, Royal Holloway University of London, UK

Readers with an interest in the motion picture industry in general and the marketing of films in particular will applaud this updated edition of Finola Kerrigan's classic on Film Marketing – to which she has added an expanded focus on the co-production of value by producers and consumers, with greater attention to the role of the audience in the interpretive reception of motion pictures. Her concerns range from the historical development of the film industry to movie marketing in the age of social media, to the nature of the cinematic consumption experience, to the societal impact of motion pictures. A must-read for all movie business buffs.

Morris B. Holbrook, W. T. Dillard Professor Emeritus of Marketing, Graduate School of Business, Columbia University, USA

With her first edition, Finola Kerrigan instantly provided the authoritative study of film marketing. Now this enriched and updated edition provides the very best text on contemporary marketing practices in the film business. Again the book demonstrates Kerrigan's impressive ability to clearly communicate while synthesizing concepts and insights from a range of perspectives. This is essential reading for anyone seeking to understand how marketing forms the vital link between the producers and consumers of films.

Paul McDonald, Head of Department, Culture, Media and Creative Industries, King's College London, UK

Film Marketing

Second Edition

Finola Kerrigan

Routledge
Taylor & Francis Group
LONDON AND NEW YORK

Second edition published 2017
by Routledge
2 Park Square, Milton Park, Abingdon, Oxon OX14 4RN

and by Routledge
711 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017

Routledge is an imprint of the Taylor & Francis Group, an informa business

© 2017 Finola Kerrigan

The right of Finola Kerrigan to be identified as author of this work has been asserted by her in accordance with sections 77 and 78 of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reprinted or reproduced or utilised in any form or by any electronic, mechanical, or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publishers.

Trademark notice: Product or corporate names may be trademarks or registered trademarks, and are used only for identification and explanation without intent to infringe.

First edition published by Routledge 2009

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data
A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data
A catalog record for this book has been requested

ISBN: 978-1-138-01335-3 (hbk)
ISBN: 978-1-138-01336-0 (pbk)
ISBN: 978-1-315-79528-7 (ebk)

Typeset in Bembo
by Sunrise Setting Ltd., Brixham, UK

Contents

List of figures ix
List of tables x
Acknowledgements xi

1 Introduction 1

What is marketing? 2
Supply chain management and marketing 5
Defining film marketing 7
Outline of the book 9

2 The origins and development of the film industry 12

Hollywood's domination of the global box office 13
Historical development of the film industry 15
Edison, technical developments and their effect on the infant industry 16
The formation of the Trust 16
Aims of the Trust and economic background 17
The opposition and their dependence on Europe 17
The growth of the independents 18
The rising importance of market awareness 18
The Trust and anti-Trust 19
World War I 20
Product differentiation 20
The birth of Hollywood 21
The US conquers Europe 22
The majors are born 22
Spiralling costs 23
The big budget feature 23
Why does the US still dominate? 24
The commercial element 25
Marketing and distribution 26
Suspicion of distributors 26
Structural considerations 26

South Korea 27
The Nigerian film industry 30

3 Market research in the film industry 33

Early forms of market research 34
Perception of market research in the film industry 35
Research processes in film marketing 35
New product development and film marketing 36
Development – project-based versus the slate approach 38
Types of research undertaken in film marketing 39
Script assessment 39
Concept testing 40
Title testing 40
Positioning studies 41
Business-to-business testing 42
Business-to-consumer testing (test screenings) 42
Recruited audience screenings 42
Testing of marketing materials (advertising testing) 44
Tracking surveys 45
Exit surveys 46
Conclusion 46

4 The film marketing mix 47

The role of the star – actors 48
The role of the star – non-actors 53
Script/genre 55
Age classification 59
Release strategy 60
Conclusion 61

5 Bringing the consumer in 62

Convergence in the creative industries 63
Crowdfunding 64
Transmedia marketing 70
The Cloverfield campaign 72
District 9 73
Conclusion 74

6 Traditional film marketing materials 75

Marketing to a sales agent 77
The unit publicist 78
The unit photographer 79

Visual representation 79
Film posters 81
Making sense of film posters 83
Film trailers 92
The purpose of the trailer 92
Bringing it all together 96
Conclusion 97

7 Consumer selection of films 98

Why we watch 99
Motives underlying film consumption 100
The impact of the film marketing mix on consumption choices 103
Establishing trust 105
Word of mouth 106
Electronic word of mouth 107
Developing an online following 109
What prevents film consumption? 111
Conclusion 111

8 Critical reception 113

The role of the critics 113
Awards ceremonies 115
Conclusion 119

9 Distribution 121

Sales agents 121
Distributors 124
Film festivals and markets 128
Release strategies 133
Self-distribution 136
When the system lets you down 139
File sharing 140
The new players in distribution 141

10 Marketing through film 144

Social and political impact of art (film) 145
Struggle for balance 146
Film as educator (the social marketing function) 147
Fact and fiction – blurring the boundaries 148
Place marketing through film 149
Product placement 151
Transitions in brand/film interrelationship 153

Branded entertainment 154
Moving forward 156

11 Conclusions 158

Limitations 158
Logic of the book 159
Setting the scene 159
New product development and research 160
The film marketing mix 160
Consumer selection of films 162
Distribution 162
Broadening the scope 163
Conclusion 164

References 165
Films 184

Figures

4.1	David Kelly, James Ryland, Robert Kickey, Ian Bannen and Matthew Devitt, Waking Ned Devine (1998) cast members	49
4.2	Cate Blanchett in Elizabeth (1998)	50
5.1	From the campaign video for My Name is Emily (2015)	69
5.2	From the Facebook page for My Name is Emily (2015)	70
5.3	Screenshots from Level 5 alert! Non-Humans Have Escaped District 9	74
6.1	Film marketing materials model	76
6.2	Stills from Uzun Yol/Little Happiness (2014)	79
6.3	Poster for A Hologram for the King (2016)	85
6.4	Poster for Me Before You (2016)	86
6.5	US theatrical poster for Dirty Pretty Things (2002)	87
6.6	UK theatrical poster for Dirty Pretty Things (2002)	89
6.7	Poster for Uzun Yol/Little Happiness (2014)	90
6.8	Poster for Crossing the Bridge: The Sound of Istanbul (2005)	91
6.9	Before and after for the Straight Outta Somewhere meme generator	96
9.1	Stills from Older than Ireland (2015) used in promotion	138
9.2	Poster for Older than Ireland (2015)	139
9.3	Cast from Older than Ireland (2015)	139

Tables

1.1	Film industry supply chain	7
3.1	New product development categories in film based on Hall's (1991) categories	36
3.2	Categories of research in the film industry	39
3.3	Example of a recruited audience screening questionnaire	44
4.1	2015 worldwide gross box office	58
4.2	List of possible genre classifications	58
6.1	List of marketing materials for potential financiers	77
7.1	Continuum of film consumers	104
8.1	Comparison of Academy Award and Golden Globe winners 2014–16	118
9.1	Practices used to defraud producers	126
9.2	Checklist of film marketing activities	136

Acknowledgements

I wrote the first edition of Film Marketing at a time of great turbulence in the film industry. Piracy was perceived as a big threat and looking at developments in the music industry, there was recognition that traditional business models were being disrupted. In the eight years between the first edition and this one, some things have indeed changed, but some things have not. The windows system of release still dominates and Hollywood films are being seen by more people than films from other cultures and industries. But there are also many changes and it can be difficult to keep up with what is going on.

Thanks must go to Amy Laurens for encouraging me to write this second edition and for her continued enthusiasm for this work. Thank you also to Nicola Cupit, Laura Hussey and Miriam Armstrong for their work in editing and producing this book. I am very grateful to Miriam Armstrong and Tim Hyde for project managing the publication of this book and Angela Yates for meticulously copyediting this manuscript.

Thanks are also due to my parents for many things, not least for taking out cinema advertising for their business when I was a teenager and therefore providing me with free weekly access to the delights of the Gaiety Cinema in Sligo. This started me off as a regular film consumer. Back in the late 1980s and early 1990s Sligo did not benefit from a wealth of international cinema, but I did get access to popular US, UK and Irish films. I need to thank my uncle, Billy Kerrigan for giving me a home away from home in Birmingham for the past three years. Thanks to my great friends at University College Galway who queued up to watch the film society films and braved the alleged mice to see great international films in the cinemas of Galway. I am very grateful to my Tuesday night cinema group because for over a decade we have sought out those films that critics told us to avoid. I hope I can see more Tuesday night films now this book is finished. Thanks to Paul Carby for not listening to me when I dismissed certain films as 'not the sort of film that I like'. Again, this broadened out my taste and I not only had the pleasure of viewing, but also his detailed knowledge of films that I did not understand made me a better researcher.

I have had the pleasure of working with a number of supportive and inspiring colleagues since I first started to take a serious interest in the film industry and film marketing issues and I would like to extend my thanks to Gisela Gauggel-Robinson, Alvaro Mason, Anne Boillot and other colleagues who encouraged my work and study of the film industry during and after my time at the MEDIA Programme. I have enjoyed working with a number of co-authors over the past number of years and work with Andrew Hart, Cagri Yalkin, Chloe Preece, Daragh O'Reilly, Dirk vom Lehn, Gretchen Larsen, Helen Blair, Kathryn Waite, Mustafa Özbilgin, Nikhilesh Dholakia, Sumanta Barua and Yu-Chien Chang have been really helpful in moving my thinking on. Some of this work is cited in this book and more of it is on its way to the world in other forms. I would also like to thank the many undergraduate and masters students that I have supervised who have worked on film-related projects for great discussion and insight. Particular thanks are due to Aneta Radomska who has helped move my thinking on transmedia marketing on and to Laura Hand who made me realise that we need greater clarity of terminology related to product placement activity. Thanks to Markus Wohlfeil and anonymous reviewers for helpful input into what I should include in the new edition of my book. What I have learned in preparing the second edition is that I cannot do justice to all the great work done by others in one book and also I cannot cover everything that anyone may want. But I have had a good try!

Over the last decade, I have formally interviewed, informally chatted with and benefited from the expertise of many film industry professionals. I am very grateful to them all for their time and the insight which they offered me over the course of my study of the film industry. I was particularly fortunate to have the opportunity to participate in the excellent Strategic Film Marketing Workshop during my doctoral study, which provided me with invaluable insight into film marketing practice. Thanks are due to Paul Nwulu who helped me navigate my way through the Nigerian film industry for the first edition of this book and to Grimot Nane for further discussions. I am very grateful to Alex Fegan for permission to use his photographs, for the time taken to grant me an interview and for helping me to obtain permission from Element Pictures for the use of their film poster for Older than Ireland. Thanks also to Audrey Sheils and Nell Roddy at Element Pictures for agreeing this permission. Thanks also to Ruth O'Neill Fitzmaurice for agreeing that I could use an image of her family and for assisting me in getting information about the crowdfunding campaign for My Name is Emily. Thanks to Kathryn Kennedy for making time to help with this detail and to agree to the use of marketing materials for My Name is Emily. Similar thanks to Negin Farsad for allowing me to follow her crowdfunding campaign for 3rd Street Blackout, ask questions and get insights from this. Thanks to Nihat Seven for giving me more insight into the challenge of marketing a serious dramatic film and for allowing me to use his photos and poster for Little Happiness.

Finally, I would like to thank Susanna Capon for inviting me to teach film marketing on the MA Film and TV Producing at Royal Holloway and Gillian Gordon for allowing me to continue. I have benefited greatly from this experience and many of the students have contributed to my research and understanding of film marketing over the years.

Sections of Chapter 2 have been previously published in Kerrigan, F. (2004) Marketing in the film industry. In: Kerrigan, F., Fraser, P. and Özbilgin, M. (eds.) Arts Marketing. Elsevier: Oxford.

1 Introduction

> Nobody knows anything . . . Not one person in the entire motion picture field knows for a certainty what's going to work. Every time out it's a guess and, if you're lucky, an educated one.
>
> (William Goldman, 1983)

It is great to have the opportunity to update the first edition of this book on film marketing because the film marketing landscape has undergone a number of exciting changes since the first edition was completed. Keeping the words of screenwriter William Goldman in mind, nobody knows anything. However, as the research undertaken for this book showed, many, many people know an awful lot. This book cannot do justice to all the great research that has been undertaken in the area of film marketing and wider complementary fields, and it is not intended to. This book is an attempt to bring together a great deal of that knowledge to assist scholars and students of film marketing. As I noted in the first edition, film marketing in many respects lags behind marketing trends in a number of other industries, and this is particularly the case with relation to the creative and innovative practices involved in film marketing. Like in the first edition, this chapter, as the opening scene for this book on film marketing, will follow the format of all good opening scenes. In doing so it will introduce the key characters of the book: marketing and the film industry. In positioning this book, as all good marketers should, in film terms it is a crossover. Although its core audience is quite niche, i.e. students, researchers and academics with an interest in the marketing elements of film, there is a desire for the book to 'crossover' into other audience groups, those with an interest in film more broadly and marketers from other sectors who are curious about the world of film marketing. The readership of the first edition was very wide and it is hoped that this revised edition will also succeed in crossing over beyond the core audience of scholars of film marketing.

As volume after volume has already been written about marketing – what it is, what it is not and what it could or should be – I will not rehearse all these debates. For that reason, readers may well dispute the presentation of marketing within these pages. My presentation of marketing theory is derived from my study of film marketing and from the elements of marketing and wider management theory that I see as helpful in understanding film marketing processes. Like all areas of marketing, film marketing concerns both the production and the consumption of film and this dual focus is present in this book. One key change from the first edition lies in the additional focus on co-production, which comes from innovations within the field of both marketing and, latterly, of film marketing. In this book, film marketing, or the marketing of film, is viewed as concerned primarily with how film-makers and marketers position the film within the minds of consumers in order to encourage consumption of their film. Scholars of audience reception studies, film studies and related areas have studied film consumption from a number of perspectives and this book will refer to these studies, but it does not claim to develop theories of audience reception. Rather, the focus on consumers is concerned with how consumers interpret the marketing messages projected by filmmakers and marketers and how this influences selection and enjoyment of film and on recent technological developments that have seen the relationship between filmmakers and consumers of film deepen.

The advantage of writing a book on film marketing is that it is possible to draw very widely on literature that can aid our understanding of film marketing processes without the constraints of submission to a high quality journal. The nature of contemporary academic life, which gives rhetorical credence to the idea of interdisciplinary work, means that academics wishing to publish their work in good quality journals must adhere to the orthodoxy of that journal. This in itself often informs the research design employed by the researcher, the literature they draw on in constructing their analytical and theoretical framework and in contextualising their research results. This results in various silos of 'knowledge' being produced. Studies examining box office data in order to look for success factors draw upon other such studies; studies looking at the impact of award ceremonies look at previous studies about award ceremonies and so on. Consumer researchers may not give great consideration to those looking at the business-to-business elements of film marketing, and film marketing scholars often ignore memoirs of film professionals, film studies scholarship and sociological analyses of film consumption. Similarly, many authors examining 'film marketing' from other disciplines such as film studies or cultural studies, or even strategy and management, do not engage with the marketing literature on this subject. In this way, many isolated pockets of film marketing knowledge co-exist without the benefit of cross-reference.

Although marketing theorists draw heavily upon sociology, psychology and economics and, more recently, cultural studies among other disciplines, there is a substantial body of work in the marketing field that must be considered in examining film marketing and consumption. Some previous authors have written about film marketing without considering the link between marketing theory and film marketing practices or fully understanding the all-encompassing nature of the marketing function.

Finally, there are many books providing more practical insights into film marketing that are very useful to film marketing practitioners, but discount considerations of the wider macro-environmental issues that impact upon film marketing. For those interested in the 'why' of film marketing as well as the 'how', this book is an attempt to provide such a link and to illustrate the relevance of marketing – specifically arts marketing theories – to our understanding of the marketing practices evident in the film industry.

What is marketing?

Marketing as a field of practice and an academic discipline is a contentious area. This is partly due to the perception of marketing as finding ways in which to sell things to people that they do not want or need. Looking to Brown (2006), marketing has been blamed for many social ills such as obesity, consumerism, psychological ills, etc. and many critics of marketing and critical marketers have examined the dark side of marketing. In addition to this recognition of 'the dark side' of marketing (Hirschman, 1991), there are various views on the historical development of the marketing function or marketing practice and there are tensions between those aligning themselves to the marketing management approach, critical marketing, post-modern marketing, relationship marketing, experiential marketing, green marketing, anti-marketing and so on. Rather than discuss these various approaches to marketing, I acknowledge the various scholarly approaches to the study and interpretation of marketing. This chapter and the remainder of the book will introduce some of these theories and approaches that have particular relevance for the study of film marketing.

In writing this book, the starting point was film marketing practice and observing these practices prompted me to explore different marketing literatures as well as research from film studies, audience reception studies, cultural studies and other areas of management. Rather than start with generic marketing theories and assess their appropriateness for application to the film industry, I have evaluated film marketing practices through an interpretive lens informed by these various literatures. This book is an attempt to introduce and explore film marketing practices with the aid of existing research as well as to set out future research questions in the area of film marketing.

The starting point for this discussion of marketing theory is exchange theory. Marketing as exchange was written about by Bogozzi (1975) and has provided a useful framework for marketing academics. The marketing management school mainly emanates from US business schools and has viewed marketing as 'the process of planning and executing the conception, pricing, promotion and distribution of ideas, goods, and services to create exchanges that satisfy individual and organizational goals' (AMA definition cited in Grönroos, 1994: 347). Following this, the AMA (American Marketing Association) launched a new definition of marketing at their 2004 Summer Educators' Conference: 'Marketing is an organizational function and a set of processes for creating, communicating and delivering value to customers and for managing customer relationships in ways that benefit the organization and its stakeholders' (AMA, n.d.). This change in definition reflects the movement of marketing academics and practitioners towards a more relational approach to marketing. Such a relational approach has been problematic in its application to film marketing due to the general lack of such a direct relationship between filmmakers and the audience for their film – a relationship that is mediated by various intermediaries who have provided access for filmmakers to the limited market. However, developments in the use of social media by filmmakers and film marketers have opened up the possibility for film marketing to take a more relational turn, as will be explored later in this book. In 2007, the AMA once again revisited their definition of marketing in recognition that marketing was not merely a function, but rather a set of practices which can be undertaken throughout an organisation. The current definition states that 'Marketing is the activity, set of institutions, and processes for creating, communicating, delivering, and exchanging offerings that have value for customers, clients, partners, and society at large' (AMA, n.d.). This broad scope definition suits the scope of this book and consideration will be given throughout the following chapters to all those areas of marketing in the context of the film industry.

The marketing concept that has dominated marketing since the 1960s has been defined by Felton (1959: 55) as 'a corporate state of mind that insists on the integration and coordination of all the marketing functions which, in turn, are melted with all other corporate functions, for the basic purpose of producing maximum long range corporate profits'. Drucker (1954) emphasised the need to place customer satisfaction at the centre of the marketing concept, with profit being achieved as a reward for attaining customer satisfaction, and marketing scholars such as Kotler have continued the call for the customer to be at the centre of marketing activities. However, when it comes to the marketing of the arts or within the cultural and creative industries, such notions of putting the customer at the centre becomes contested. One of the basic elements of the 'customer as king' philosophical approach to marketing is to find out what the customer wants, and therefore there is a clear tension between this approach and the process of product development and marketing in the film industry, in common with other arts sectors. However, recent global box office trends and financing practices among Hollywood studios indicate that the customer-centric approach may be informing marketing practice in the film industry to an increasing degree. Although it will be necessary to make some generalisations regarding film marketing and filmmaking in this book, it is important to point out from the outset that industry rules diverge based on whether they are dictated by Hollywood studios or a more independent spirit of filmmaking. As discussed in this book, contemporary Hollywood is viewed as risk averse. The marketing concept and customer-centric approach dominate and the interpretation of this approach is to develop 'me too' products, tried and tested genres, prequels, sequels and adaptations of other cultural products that have a proven audience. Conversely, filmmakers not following the Hollywood studio approach can be viewed as subscribing to the much criticised product approach where the producers are focused on making the film, without considering the market for the film. Once the film is completed, issues of marketing and consumption of the film are considered, but this is a rather simplistic analysis of the film marketing process. Although consumers are rarely consulted prior to the development of a film script, at various stages in a project's development, market-sensing activities are undertaken. Some of these practices are embedded within the practice of film professionals to such an extent that they are not explicit, while others are explicitly undertaken. This book will unpick these practices in order to illustrate that filmmakers and marketers are also subject to some standard marketing practices, as well as highlighting the differences apparent when marketing artistic products, such as film, rather than more mainstream products or services.

Moving forward from considerations of 'putting the customer first' or 'exchanging value' with the consumer, Vargo and Lusch's (2004) paper, which proposed a 'New Dominant Logic for Marketing', and the many papers following this have placed the discussion of the merging of what we formerly considered the goods/service divide. One of the central developments from this body of work is the acceptance of the notion that value can only be created and acknowledged by the consumer in the act of consumption. It is in the act of consumption that value is recognised and embodied. Value can only be evaluated in terms of the consumption experience. In this way, marketing theorists have moved from central ideas of value in exchange to value in use. This book centralises the notion of film having a value in use rather than an abstract value – because film can play a number of roles – but it must be consumed in order for that value to be articulated and made real. Moving on from outmoded ideas of consumers as being 'done to', Vargo and Lusch (2006: 44) reworked their notion of 'co-production' from their earlier 2004 paper. Vargo and Lusch (2006) began to refer to the customer as 'co-creator of value'. This develops their earlier theory of 'co-production', which they acknowledged was more appropriate for a production-centred approach, rather than service-centred approach. Preece et al. (2016) looked at how value is established in the visual arts, and drawing on the New Dominant Logic, they argued that such considerations of value must account for understanding the power of various actors within the industry. This is also the case for film because value may well be in use. This value is related to how consumers make sense of film (Chapter 7). How a film is positioned to the consumer, in terms of the marketing campaign is examined in Chapters 6 and 8. Chapter 8 also covers how value is interpreted by reviewers (professional and non-professional) and in what way it will impact on how the film is evaluated by the consumer. My study of film marketing began by studying the activities of filmmakers and film marketers which fed into what I classified as film marketing. This involved considerations of how these actors conceived of the consumer and their perceptions of value. Much of the film marketing activities which an organisation engages in presume that there is value in use and market research aims to find out what that value is.

Much of the rhetoric surrounding the marketing focus and the subsequent marketing orientation that companies adopt as a result of this orientation focuses on the needs and wants of the customer. As noted earlier, it is here that arts marketing researchers encounter problems. How do the ideas of customer satisfaction fit compatibly with the creation of artistic works? Are existing theories of marketing sufficiently broad to deal with marketing in the creative industries? In answer to these questions, researchers including Brown (2006), Fillis (2004), O'Reilly (2004), O'Reilly and Kerrigan (2010, 2016), O'Reilly et al. (2013), O'Reilly et al. (2014) and Rentschler (1999, 2004) have tried to redefine marketing theory in order to provide useful frameworks for the analysis of marketing the arts or creative industries. In the first edition of this book, I identified a problem facing arts marketing researchers when looking at literatures on market orientation because I questioned their transferability to the arts sector. However, current practices in Hollywood studios imply a market orientation, with future decisions resting on the performance of films with similar characteristics. How such characteristics are defined may lead to a short-sighted approach to market orientation.

For example, Paul Feig, director of box office hit Bridesmaids (2011), Spy (2015) and the all-female lead version of Ghostbusters (2016), has spoken about the pressure he feels for his films to be successful because studios are overly cautious about female-led or female-leaning stories. Chapters 7 and 8 consider gender bias in user-generated and critical reviews that may feed into this caution. Rather than viewing Bridesmaids as a madcap comedy that happened to feature female stars in the leading roles, it was viewed as a film for women and, as such, a measure of the overall demand for women's films.

When considering the application of the concept of market orientation to the area of film marketing we must assess the appropriateness of the seminal articles by Narver and Slater (1990) and Kohli and Jaworski (1990). Narver and Slater (1990) conceive of market orientation as culturally constructed and focused on meeting consumer needs and wants, and therefore gaining competitive advantage. In contrast, Kohli and Jaworski (1990) adopted a behavioural approach that concentrated on the process of understanding the consumer's wants and needs through engaging in extensive information collection. The complication when trying to apply this to the film marketing domain is that although it is possible to collect and analyse data on past consumption of consumers, each film is an original experiential product that may appeal to a consumer against their expectations. This makes it difficult for filmmakers and marketers to adopt a market orientation. As will be discussed later, world events, other films released around the same time and so on can all influence film consumption and the product development process can be very long.

However, it may not be necessary to turn away completely from the marketing concept in order to examine film marketing. If customer satisfaction is seen as the ultimate goal of market orientation (Kotler, 2002) it can be seen as compatible with film marketing aims. It is the process by which this satisfaction is achieved that needs to be reconceptualised following developments in the marketing literature discussed earlier, as well as key theoretical debates in the consumer theory literature, which are discussed later. Consumer satisfaction cannot be achieved through asking consumers what they want to watch films about and then making them, but it can be achieved by making films that are of high technical and/or artistic value and positioning these films appropriately in order to appeal to the target market. If a broad view is taken, we can state that companies or filmmaking collectives can possess a market orientation in the film industry if their focus is upon identifying and targeting an appropriate audience and satisfying the expectations of this audience. As films are made to be watched (consumed), there is a need to focus on the audience. This, however, does not imply a need to 'give them what they want', but rather that filmmakers and marketers have an understanding of the different film audiences that exist and how to engage them. This approach emphasises the need to segment the audience for film, to select appropriate segments based on how receptive they will be to the film in question, to target these segments through marketing communications, and to position the film appropriately by setting expectations in relation to its genre, style and so on. Recent developments in film distribution now require consideration of the viewing environment to a greater degree than before. Although the ultimate aim of a film in the minds of the filmmakers may be to screen the film in cinemas, increasing home consumption, as well as consumption 'on the move', now also factors into consumer decision making.

Supply chain management and marketing

In the first edition of this book, and drawing on my early research on film marketing, I discussed the film supply chain. What was clear from this early research was that film marketing begins right from a film's conception and continues through to the act of consumption. Kerrigan and Yalkin (2009) found that consumers also extend their consumption experience by posting and reading reviews and going on to watch related films. This need to develop a more holistic notion of film marketing led me to the consideration of the supply chain literature. My early doctoral research confirmed two things: non-Hollywood films suffered from not having vertically integrated supply chains and the marketing process should begin as early as possible in order for it to be effective. Recent developments in film marketing, such as the use of social media and the development of transmedia campaigns, mean that this holistic view is even more important than before. Where I previously focused on the need for independent filmmakers to 'market' their film through each stage of the supply chain, from development to production to distribution and finally to the audience, and highlighted the challenges faced in having such a disjointed supply chain, these technological developments have forced/allowed independent filmmakers to consider and engage with the ultimate consumer for the film from the outset. This has led to a more creative approach to film marketing, but also placed demands on independent filmmakers to become marketing savvy in a way unprecedented prior to the social media age.

Min (2000) proposed that the marketing concept is compatible with theories of supply chain management as well as that of relationship marketing by linking the marketing concept theoretically to the philosophical origins of relationship marketing and to the underlying philosophy of supply chain management. Min (2000) outlined a clear link between the marketing concept's focus on the customer, coordinated marketing and the profitability aim and the philosophical foundation of relationship marketing. Focusing on coordinated marketing and the customer is equally applicable to analysis of the supply chain literature. This interdependence, which Min identifies between the acceptance of the marketing concept and the practice of supply chain management, has resonance for researching marketing within the film industry. In order to discuss the concept of supply chain management in relation to the film industry, it is first necessary to define these terms.

Mentzer et al. (2001: 2) define a supply chain as 'a set of three or more companies directly linked by one or more of the upstream and downstream flow of products, services, finances, and information from a source to a customer'. The three main activities in the film industry are production, distribution and exhibition. For a film to reach the marketplace it must pass through the hands of a production company, a distributor and an exhibitor. There may be one or more production companies involved in a film production. There are generally a number of distributors involved (each with control of various distribution territories) and an even larger number of exhibitors, whether they are individual cinemas or large exhibition companies. Latterly, technological developments have meant that this traditional supply chain has been circumvented by a number of enterprising filmmakers. Just as the Young British Artists (YBAs) circumvented the traditional visual art route to market, these filmmakers are finding an audience outside the formal market structures through developments such as crowd sourcing. Additionally, new entrants such as Netflix and Amazon are now financing and distributing film, and therefore circumventing the traditional supply chain within the film industry.

The definition proposed by Mentzer et al. (2001: 2) defines supply chain management as 'the systemic, strategic coordination of the traditional business functions within a particular company and across businesses within the supply chain, for the purposes of improving the long-term performance of the individual companies and the supply chain as a whole'. This definition is helpful in terms of the study of the film industry because it recognises the need to coordinate activities across functions as well as across organisations. What is also welcome in this definition is the recognition for this process of coordination to occur in order to ensure sustainability. In referring back to the discussion of film industry policy developments over the past number of years, this need for sustainability has been recognised by film policymakers at national and supra-national level. A discussion of the film industry supply chain, in line with Mentzer et al.'s (2001) definition is therefore entirely appropriate.

Mentzer et al. (2000b) also stress that the existence of a supply chain does not infer that supply chain management is being undertaken. In fact, in the case of the film industry, what is problematic is the absence of such management or a coordination that will lead to long-term sustainability. In the case of

Table 1.1 Film industry supply chain

Development	Pre-production	Production	Post-production	Advertising and distribution	Exhibition
Rights acquisition	Financing	Above the line	Editing	Sales	Theatrical
Script development	Greenlighting	Below the line	Soundtrack	Distribution	DVD/On-demand
Concept testing	Crew		Special effects	Trailers	Pay TV
	Cast			Publicity	Free TV

the vertically integrated Hollywood majors, it can be argued that such supply chain management does exist, and this explains why they have dominated the film industry since their formation in the 1920s. In this respect, it will be interesting to observe the evolution of Netflix and Amazon and other new entrants to the industry that have guaranteed small screen exhibition, financing and promotion capacity.

The various stages in the film industry supply chain, as well as the activities involved in each of these stages, are illustrated in Table 1.1. This table shows that the processes are presented as linear, although some of these stages overlap depending on the nature of the film project, the type of finance and, importantly, the nature (if any) of the supply chain management.

In order to understand the impact of an integrated supply chain on the process of marketing a film, it is important to develop ideas drawn from the supply chain literature, such as waste minimisation (in the case of the film industry, this waste is creativity). Building on this, Mentzer et al. (2000a) identify the importance of looking at supply chain relationships in the traditional manner of the consideration of operational issues and also to considering relationship building as an important function. They focused upon retail supply chains, but their thesis is equally applicable to the film industry. European film production and distribution companies in general conform to the model of 'partnering relationships' where relationships are the result of extensive operational links developed over time. Although this partnering was traditionally between film producers and distributors, the new developments, which will be discussed in this book, require partnering to occur between a range of other actors, including new marketing companies engaged in the development of transmedia campaigns.

The previous sections emphasise the need for close long-term inter-firm relationships and inter-firm cooperation. These are the two resultant components of supply chain management according to Min (2000: 93). As the film industry is characterised as high risk (Biskind, 1998; Eberts and Ilott, 1990; Evans, 2003; Finney, 1998; Phillips, 1991), such close inter-firm relationships and inter-firm cooperation can provide a level of reduced risk. Sheth and Parvatiyar (1995) illustrated how perceived risk is linked to uncertainty. Such uncertainty of outcome is inherent in the film industry and it is therefore natural to seek assurance through established relationships. Such inter-firm relationships are the norm in the European film industry and the nature of the relationships which have formed out of this fragmented structure is documented by Eberts and Ilott (1990), Finney (1998) and Kuhn (2003). In these accounts, much emphasis is placed on risk and the need for close relationships to form where creative and financial risks could be taken due to the high levels of trust in existence in the inter-firm or inter-personal relationships.

Defining film marketing

It is necessary at this stage to define what is meant by film marketing and to show how this book will go beyond some others in illustrating that film marketing is more than marketing communications in the film industry. Film marketing, in line with the marketing management processes in other industries, begins at the new product development stage and continues throughout the formation of the project ideas, through production and into distribution and exhibition. At key stages in the product life cycle, various actors are involved in numerous marketing activities, from marketing an idea or a script to a production company to the final marketing of the film in cinemas, on DVD and through other exhibition outlets such as video on demand (VOD), subscription and cable television and terrestrial television. Durie et al. (2000: 5) define film marketing as 'any activity that assists a film in reaching its target audience at any time throughout its life'. In addition to the managerial functions associated with film marketing, and following Vargo and Lusch (2004, 2006), it is necessary to continue the film marketing journey into the realm of film consumption and out the other side. If film consumption can be seen as a journey, it may be difficult to identify the beginning and the end of such a journey. As Kerrigan and Yalkin (2009) found, film consumption does not end as the credits come up on a film because consumers may wish to extend their consumption through visiting online review sites, discussing the film with friends or progressing with their film consumption to consumer related films. Hart et al.'s (2016) film consumption experience model identified that film-specific factors, viewing environment and situational environment collectively contribute to film consumption decisions. Consumption of one film may lead a consumer to seek out other films by a particular director or writer, to find out more about the composer of the soundtrack or artists featured on the soundtrack. If a film is a remake, they may be tempted to seek out the original. As discussed by Wohlfeil and Whelan (2008), film consumers may wish to watch other films featuring a favourite actor.

In this way, film consumption may be viewed as a more cyclical activity, and film consuming may be inspired by other cultural products such as books, music, television, newspaper articles and so on. This necessitates any study of film marketing to consider both the producer and consumer perspectives and to look at where these intersect. How do consumers create value through their consumption of film and when does this value creation begin and end? I propose that value creation begins at the point where consumers become aware of a film and try to make sense of the messages they are receiving from the filmmakers, film marketers that are mediated by the press and other film consumers. The process ends somewhere after consumption when the consumer makes sense of their experience and draws on this experience to consume the film again, to recommend to others or to move on to a related film. It would be misleading to portray this process of value creation as simple and tightly bounded. For example, when reviewing The Boat that Rocked (2009) UK film critic Mark Kermode referred to a previous film by the writer/director Richard Curtis, Love Actually (2003). Kermode had originally hated the film, but when he watched it again he began to like it. Despite having intensely disliked the film on the first viewing, Kermode was persuaded to revisit the film by his wife and after doing so he revised his opinion. The process of value creation, therefore, cannot be seen as being a contract between the filmmaker/marketer and the consumer, but takes place in what du Gay et al. (2000) call a circuit of cultural consumption.

Developments in online marketing have prompted marketing practitioners and scholars to distinguish between paid, owned and earned media (Corcoran, 2009). Stephen and Galak (2012) have defined paid media as 'media activity that is generated by the company (or its agents)' and owned media as 'media activity that is generated by the company (or its agents) in channels it controls' (2012: 629). They define earned media as 'media activity that is not directly generated by the company but rather by other entities such as customers' (Stephen and Galak, 2012: 629). What is interesting is the focus on the production of the material here rather than the specific actions around it. A more workable set of definitions in the context of film marketing comes from Grainge and Johnson (2015) whose all encompassing study of promotional screen industries considers both the production of the promotional artefacts and also notes the possibility for these to be used in different ways, necessitating different ways of examining them. Grainge and Johnson (2015: 107) offer the following definitions:

> bought media denotes the traditional model of buying advertising and media space . . . owned media describes the opportunity for brands to own and distribute original media content through broadcast channels, websites, online video channels and social media platforms . . . earned media becomes the point where viewers distribute that content for nothing because they are engaged by it.

Although these definitions is also not entirely perfect in terms of depicting what is going on in the social media age in relation to film promotion, it does highlight some key issues. Paid/bought media is generally seen as conventional advertising, mainly in old media contexts, but this can also account for paid messaging online and in social media feeds. A less discussed form of paid is where content that looks like earned media is, in fact, bought. Twitter followers, positive reviews and so on, can in fact be bought just like more conventional forms of media. Bought or paid is not always apparent as such. Perhaps a more workable definition is that bought or paid media is that which comes under complete control of the brand in terms of creative content and placement.

Moving on to owned media, this can relate to activities within spaces created by the brand, which allow the brand to exhibit and share their own content as well as hosting that of consumers. This is what is often at play in transmedia campaigns, which will be discussed in Chapter 5.

The final category, earned media, is related to word of mouth or the creation and dissemination of verbal, visual or audio-visual material related to the brand. This is discussed in Chapters 5, 6 and 7 and is also a central part of crowdfunding and transmedia campaigns.

Academic film marketing literature has been developing in line with the increasing interest in the creative industries and acknowledgement of the economic value of these industries in developed market economies. Following this interest, there is now a significant body of research published in marketing and management journals that considers elements of film marketing. To date, books on film marketing written from a marketing perspective are limited and, as noted earlier, those wishing to engage with film marketing have had to trawl through numerous journals in order to familiarise themselves with the current literature. Although this book is not exhaustive in terms of the literature that is relevant to film marketing, by incorporating film studies, cultural studies, media reception studies, sociological and psychological studies alongside core film marketing literature, it attempts to provide a good framework within which to consider the key elements of film marketing. The approach taken in this book centralises studies of the macro-, meso- and micro-environment and how activities at these three levels impact on and influence film marketing activities, and therefore it starts with a broad overview of the film industry before moving on to more specific topics.

Outline of the book

Chapter 2 considers the origins and development of the film industry. This chapter traces the structural development of the film industry, with special emphasis on the integrated Hollywood model. This integrated model is seen as offering the greatest possibility of success for individual films due to the automatic access that filmmakers have to distribution and exhibition once they are aligned with one of the major Hollywood film companies. The current trend in the global entertainment industries is integration. A range of literature is presented that shows the importance of policy and diplomacy in supporting the growth of the US film industry. The chapter traces some key world events that have impacted on the development of national film industries in Europe and moves forward to considerations of the impact of key supra-national policies on the global film industry. In addition to rehearsing established analyses of the dominant position of the US major studios, this chapter also introduces the contrasting examples of the Nigerian and South Korean film industries in order to illustrate the impact of the wider macro-environment on the development of national film industries.

Chapter 3 examines the development of the research function in film marketing and considers both formalised and informal methods of research that are used. The chapter begins with reviewing the historical development of the research function in the film industry illustrating the origins of some of the practices still used today. It examines the practice of new product development as applied to the film industry and concludes with an overview of the various applications of research to the film industry.

Chapter 4 reviews the fundamentals of film marketing through introducing the film marketing mix consisting of the core elements that must be considered by filmmakers and definitely by film marketers. These elements can act as signals to the film consumer to help them evaluate the film prior to consumption. The first of these elements of the film marketing mix is the star. This chapter develops existing notions of the film star to include the director, director of photography and other key creative personnel who may possesses star quality. The next element to be considered is the genre and the associated element of the script, before the age classification and release strategy are discussed. In discussing the film marketing mix, this chapter highlights the need to avoid the painting by numbers approach to filmmaking, which some film marketing research may endorse. Although a number of studies have shown the ability to predict box office earnings of films in possession of a particular range of film marketing elements, such as an identified cast member, a clearly defined genre and a particular release strategy, each film is an individual creative product and therefore the combination and management of the film marketing mix will depend upon the film in question and the target audience for the film.

Chapter 5 brings the focus of the book around to the consumer. In recognition of the more consumer-focused nature of film marketing in the social media age, this chapter considers crowdfunding and transmedia marketing in terms of wider film marketing and consumption considerations.

Chapter 6 reviews the area of traditional film marketing materials and, in doing so, establishes that despite online marketing activities being now very dominant in the field of film marketing, even these activities draw on similar principles to those underpinning design decisions in the development of posters and trailers and more longstanding marketing materials. Quite often what is circulated or 'spread', to use the term from Jenkins et al. (2013) is a form of the poster, trailer or other material created by the film company (owned media) and it is therefore important to understand the reasoning underpinning the creation of these communication artefacts. This chapter also considers the various people involved in the development and circulation of these materials.

Following on from this, Chapter 7 introduces the reader to theories related to consumer selection of film. Having considered the various elements of the film marketing mix, this chapter turns to examine how the consumer responds to the presentation of this mix. The chapter discusses literature regarding the role of film fans and word of mouth on film selection and therefore on film performance. It also reflects on possible gender bias, which is apparent in user-generated reviews and has not been fully researched. Film consumption as an individual and a group practice is considered in this chapter and the methods employed in researching issues of consumer selection are discussed and critiqued. Although this is one of the most researched areas in the film marketing literature, this chapter illustrates the need for more studies with a focus on consumer selection of film to be undertaken. There is a need to question accepted notions of causality and many of the rational choice models that are still applied to the study of consumer selection. There is also a need to understand film consumers in a holistic way. The chapter considers studies that show the variation in film consumers in terms of the role a film plays in their lives and the subsequent differences they display in selecting a film to be consumed in various contexts. In addition to examining the processes that lead to film consumption, the chapter also considers what may prevent film consumption.

Chapter 8 grapples with the idea of quality in film and considers the role of critics in influencing and/or predicting the box office return for a film. It also examines the literature on the impact of awards on a film's financial performance and confirms the importance of the Academy Awards for a film in terms of signalling to the audience.

Chapter 9 examines the area of film distribution and examines the relevance of key events, such as film festivals and markets. In addition, following on from Chapter 4, the film release strategy is elaborated upon. There are a number of established practices within the film industry in terms of when and where films are premiered, how festival buzz and awards can be used in terms of the business-to-business and business-to-consumer marketing campaigns and when films are released based on genre and target audience. This chapter examines these industry practices and also looks at instances where they have not been adhered to. Some key film festivals and markets are introduced and discussed in terms of their importance for filmmakers and film marketers. In order to understand the importance of these events, it is also important to understand the role and impact of various film marketing actors. The chapter discusses the role of the sales agent and the distributor in particular and illustrates their importance in moving a film through the film marketing calendar. It also considers new entrants to the film distribution field and the area of self-distribution.

Chapter 10 broadens the scope of the book by examining the role of film in social and societal marketing. This chapter is concerned with the political nature of film as a form of art and social commentary. Moving away from questions of how to get industry figures and finally consumers to support and then consume a film, Chapter 10 is concerned with the impact of this film consumption. In the early days of the film industry, public figures were suspicious of the possible negative impact that film could have on moral values. Film has also been used as a form of propaganda and a tool for social and political change. This chapter looks at film in terms of these various roles and considers that marketing the film to consumers may just be the start of the marketing process, and with many (if not all) films, the consumption of the film may result in forms of social and societal marketing. At the very least, film consumption impacts on how we see the world and various communities within the world. Film either supports established perceptions and norms or challenges them. Following considerations of film as a social or political tool and film as an educator, Chapter 10 continues to explore the blurring of boundaries that has taken place within the media and within the realm of film in particular. A film marketing continuum that examines the motivations of the film marketer in terms of their perception of consumer demands is proposed in order to represent the various commercial, social and societal roles that film marketing must engage with. This establishment of film as a powerful communicator of meaning leads into the consideration of film as a vehicle to promote brand, products and places and introduces and explores the concept of branded entertainment as an evolved form of product placement.

Finally, Chapter 11 reflects on the book as a whole and the current state of knowledge of film marketing. It summarises the key issues covered, looks at developments occurring in the film marketing literature that are not included in the earlier chapters and provides suggestions for future research in the area of film marketing. This chapter calls for a greater focus on film marketing studies that embed the study of film marketing within wider understanding of the role of film in society. The need to look at the individual and the group when studying film marketing is proposed, as well as a call for integration of studies of the producer and the consumer when looking at film marketing practices and their impact.

This introductory chapter has set the scene for this book and, like a consumer who has seen a poster or trailer for a film and then read some reviews, the reader should have some idea of what to expect as they move through this book. In saying that, I hope that like a good filmmaker, I will provide some surprises along the way. This book collects key literature and concepts that I think will help in understanding what film marketing is, how it is practiced and the impact that film marketing may have on individual consumers and on wider society.

References

Abbasi, M. (2014) The smaller, the better. Student micro films. Impact Nottingham. Available at www.impactnottingham.com/2014/11/the-smaller-the-better-student-micro-films/ (3 November 2014) (accessed 1 March 2016).

Adorno, T. and Eisler, H. (1994) Prejudices and bad habits. In: Dickinson K. (ed.), Movie Music: the Film Reader. Routledge: New York, NY, pp. 25–35.

Agrawal, A.K. , Catalini, C. and Goldfarb, A. (2011) The Geography of Crowdfunding (No. w16820). National Bureau of Economic Research: Cambridge, MA.

Aksoy, A. and Robbins, K. (1992) Hollywood for the 21st century: global competition for critical mass in image markets. Cambridge Journal of Economics, 16, 1–22.

Alberstat, P. (2004) The Insider's Guide to Film Finance. Focal Press: Oxford.

Albert, S. (1998) Movie stars and the distribution of financially successful films in the motion picture industry. Journal of Cultural Economics, 22 (4), 249–270.

Alexander, V. (2015) I am so over 'The Male Gaze'. The Huffington Post, 18 December. Available at www.huffingtonpost.com/valerie-alexander/i-am-so-over-the-male-gaze_b_8842868.html (accessed 1 June 2016).

Ambler, T. (1997) How much of brand equity is explained by trust? Management Decision, 35, 283.

American Marketing Association (AMA) (n.d.) 'Brand' definition. Available at www.ama.org/resources/pages/dictionary.aspx?dLetter=B (accessed 20 November 2016).

Anderson, E.W. (1998) Consumer satisfaction and word of mouth. Journal of Services Research, 1 (1), 5–17.

Anderson, R. (1985) The Motion Picture Patents Company: a reevaluation. In: Balio T. (ed.), The American Film Industry. 2nd edn. University of Wisconsin Press: Madison, WI, pp. 133–152.

Andreoni, J. and Vesterlund, L. (2001) Which is the fair sex? Gender differences in altruism. Quarterly Journal of Economics, 116, 293–312.

Armstrong, G. and Kotler, P. (2000) Principles of Marketing. Prentice Hall: London.

August, T. , Dao, D. and Shin, H. (2015) Optimal timing of sequential distribution: the impact of congestion externalities and day-and-date strategies. Marketing Science, 34 (5), 755–774.

Austin, B.A. (1980) Rating the movies. Journal of Popular Film and Television, 7 (4), 384–399.

Austin, B.A. (1989) Immediate Seating: A Look at Movie Audiences. Wadsworth: Belmont, CA.

Balancing Act (2016) Broadcast reports. Available at www.balancingact-africa.com/reports/broadcast/vod-and-africa—a-review-of-existing-vod-services-drivers-challenges-and-opportunities-2016-update (accessed 20 November 2016).

Balasubramanian, S.K. (1994) Beyond advertising and publicity: hybrid messages and public policy issues. Journal of Advertising, 23 (4), 29–46.

Balio, T. (ed.) (1976) The American Film Industry. University of Wisconsin Press: Madison, WI.

Balio, T. (ed.) (1985) The American Film Industry. 2nd edn. University of Wisconsin Press: Madison, WI.

Bansal, H.S. and Voyer, P.A. (2000) Word-of-mouth processes within a services purchase decision context. Journal of Service Research, 3 (2), 166–177.

Barnard, H. and Tuomi, K. (2008) How demand sophistication (de-)limits economic upgrading: comparing the film industries of South African and Nigeria (Nollywood). Industry and Innovation, 15 (6), 647–668.

Barr, C. (ed.) (1996) All our Yesterdays: 90 Years of British Cinema. 3rd edn. BFI Publishing: London.

Barraclough, E. (2016) The rise of China's film industry. WIPO Magazine, April. Available at www.wipo.int/wipo_magazine/en/2016/02/article_0004.html (accessed 15 May 2016).

Barua, S. (2016) The role of experience in facilitating networking in a B2B context. Unpublished PhD thesis, King's College London.

Bass, F.M. (1969) A new-product growth model for consumer durables. Management Science, 15, 215–227.

Baudrillard, J. (1994) Simulacra and Simulation [Trans. Sheila Faria Glaser]. University of Michigan Press: Ann Arbor, MI.

Baumann, S. (2001) Intellectualization and art world development: film in the United States. American Sociological Review, 66 (3), 404–426.

BBC News (2008) Film trailer voice-over king dies. Available at http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/entertainment/7595352.stm (accessed 12 June 2016).

Becker, H.S. (1982) Art Worlds. University of California Press: Berkeley, CA.

Beeton, S. (2005) Film-Induced Tourism. Vol. 25. Channel View Publications: Bristol, UK.

Beeton, S. (2010) The advance of film tourism. Tourism and Hospitality Planning and Development, 7 (1), 1–6.

Belk, R. (1988) Possessions and the extended self. Journal of Consumer Research, 15 (2), 139–168.

Berger, J. (2000) Ways of Seeing. Penguin Books: London.

Berkowitz, D. (2015) New technologies can help brands bring storymaking to life. Four technologies that are powering storymaking, Advertising Age, 9 April. Available at http://adage.com/article/digitalnext/technologies-brands-bring-storymaking-life/297985/ (accessed 10 May 2016).

Berney, B. (2006) Independent distribution. In: Squire J.E. (ed.), The Movie Business Book (International 3rd edn.). McGraw-Hill: Maidenhead, UK, pp. 375–383.
Bernstein, P. (2013) The Act of Killing releases BitTorrent bundle with exclusive content. IndieWire, 31 December. Available at www.indiewire.com/2013/12/the-act-of-killing-releases-bittorrent-bundle-with-exclusive-content-31823/ (accessed 20 June 2016).
Bernstein, P. (2014) How did the 2014 Sundance Film Festival filmmakers crowdfund (if at all?), IndieWire, 28 January 2014. www.indiewire.com/2014/01/how-did-the-2014-sundance-film-festival-filmmakers-crowdfund-if-at-all-30696/ (accessed 20 December 2016).
Berra, J. (2008) Declarations of Independence: American Cinema and the Partiality of Independent Production. Intellect: Bristol, UK.
Berry, C. (2003) What's big about the big film? 'De-Westernising' the blockbuster in Korea and China. In: Stringer J. (ed.), Movie Blockbusters. Routledge: London, pp. 217–229.
Bertacchini, E. , Santagata, W. and Signorello, G. (2011) Individual giving to support cultural heritage. International Journal of Arts Management, 13 (3).
Berthon, P.R. , Pitt, L.F. , Plangger, K. and Shapiro, D. (2012) Marketing meets Web 2.0, social media, and creative consumers: implications for international marketing strategy. Business Horizons, 55 (3), 261–271.
Betts, E. (1973) The Film Business, a History of British Cinema 1896–1972. George Allen and Unwin: London.
Bhaumik, K. (2004) A brief history of cinema from Bombay to 'Bollywood'. History Compass, 2 (1), 1–4.
Biskind, P. (1998) Easy Rider, Raging Bulls: How the Sex-Drugs-and-Rock 'N' Roll Generation Saved Hollywood. Simon and Schuster: New York, NY.
Biskind, P. (2004) Down and Dirty Pictures: Miramax, Sundance, and the Rise of Independent Film. (2004) Simon and Schuster: New York, NY.
Biyalogorsky, E. , Gerstner, E. and Libai, B. (2001) Customer referral management: optimal. Reward programs. Marketing Science 20 (1), 82–95.
Blair, H. and Kerrigan, F. (2002) A new era or a recurring pattern? An analysis of current trends in European and British film making. In: Stavros A.V. (ed.), Advances in Communication and Media Research. Vol. 1. Nova Science Publishers: New York, NY, pp. 105–117.
Blair, H. and Rainnie, A. (2000) Flexible films? Media, Culture and Society, 22, 187–204.
Blume, S.E. (2006) The revenue streams: an overview. In: Squire J. (ed.), The Movie Business Book. Open University Press: Maidenhead, pp. 332–359.
Blumenthal, M.A. (1988) Auctions with constrained information: blind bidding for motion pictures. Review of Economics and Statistics, 70, 191–198.
Bogozzi, R.P. (1975) Marketing as exchange. Journal of Marketing, 39, 32–39.
Bolton, R.N. and Drew, J.H. (1992) Mitigating the effect of service encounters. Marketing Letters, 3 (1), 57–70.
Borden, N.H. (1964) The concept of the marketing mix. Journal of Advertising Research, 4, 2–7.
Borgerson, J.L. and Schroeder, J.E. (2005) Identity in marketing communications: an ethics of visual representation. In: Kimmel A.J. (ed.), Marketing Communication: New Approaches, Technologies and Styles. Oxford University Press: Oxford, pp. 256–277.
Bourdieu, P. (1977) Outline of a Theory of Practice. Cambridge University Press: Cambridge.
Bourdieu, P. (1984) Distinction: A Social Critique of the Judgement of Taste [Trans. R. Nice]. Harvard University Press: Cambridge, MA.
Bourdieu, P. (1989) Social space and symbolic power. Sociological Theory, 7, 14–25.
Bourdieu, P. (2003) Distinction: A Social Critique of the Judgement of Taste. Routledge: London.
Bourdieu, P. and Passeron, J.-C. (1990) Reproduction in Education, Society and Culture. Vol. 4. Sage Publications: London.
Bowser, E. (1990) The Transformation of Cinema 1907–1915 (History of the American Cinema, Vol. 2). Charles Scribner's Sons: New York, NY.
Box Office Mojo (n.d.) 2015 Worldwide Grosses. Available at www.boxofficemojo.com/yearly/chart/?view2=worldwide&yr=2015.
Brehm, J.W. (1966) A Theory of Psychological Reactance. Academic Press: New York, NY.
Brevet, B. (2005) Golden Globes vs. Oscars: how do the winners compare?. comingsoon.net, 14 January. Available at www.ropeofsilicon.com/article/golden_globes_vs_oscar_how_do_the_winners_compare (accessed 20 April 2009).
Brevet, B. (2014) Golden Globe winners vs. Oscars: the 2014 update!. comingsoon.net, 13 January. Available at www.comingsoon.net/movies/news/587460-golden-globe-winners-vs-oscars-2014-update#ZT4feJpyd6FVG1Ok.99 (accessed 18 November 2016).
Brown, J. , Broderick, A.J. and Lee, N. (2007) Word of mouth communication within online communities: conceptualizing the online social network. Journal of Interactive Marketing, 21 (3), 2–20.
Brown, S. (2006) The Marketing Code. Marshall Cavendish: Singapore.
Bryant, C.A. (2000) Social marketing: a new approach to improved patient care. Social Marketing, 7 (4), 161–167.
Brzeski, P. (2015) China box office grows astonishing 48.7 percent in 2015, hits $6.78 billion. The Hollywood Reporter, 31 December. Available at www.hollywoodreporter.com/news/china-box-office-grows-astonishing-851629 (accessed 23 November 2016).

Burzynski, M. and Bayer, D. (1977) The effect of positive and negative prior information on motion picture appreciation. Journal of Social Psychology, 101, 215–218.
Busch, A. , Jaafar, A. and Tartaglione, N. (2016) Martin Scorsese's mob film The Irishman in major deal to STX after heated bidding war – Cannes. Deadline.com, 15 May. Available at http://deadline.com/2016/05/martin-scorsese-the-irishman-stx-huge-deal-mob-films-cannes-1201756232/ (accessed 30 May 2016).
Buscombe, E. (1977) The idea of genre in the American Film. In: Grant B.K. (ed.), Film Genre: Theory and Practice. Scarecrow Press: Metuchen, NJ.
Butler, J.G. (1990) Star Texts: Image and Performance in Film and Television. Wayne State University Press: Detroit, MI.
Buttle, F. (1998) Word of mouth: understanding and managing referral marketing. Journal of Strategic Marketing, 6, 241–254.
Cameron, S. (1995) On the role of critics in the cultural industry. Journal of Cultural Economics, 19 (4), 321–331.
Caruso, E. M. and Shafir, E. (2006) Now that I think about it, I'm in the mood for laughs: decisions focused on mood. Journal of Behavioral Decision Making, 19, 155–169.
Chambers, R. (1947) The need for statistical research. Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, 254, 169–172.
Chen, Y. and Xie, J. (2008) Online consumer review: word-of-mouth as a new element of marketing communication mix. Management Science, 54 (3), 477–491.
Christopherson, S. and Storper, M. (1986) The city as studio, the world as backlot: the impact of vertical disintegration on location of the motion-picture industry. Environment and Planning D: Society and Space, 4, 305–320.
Collins, A. and Hand, C. (2005) Analysing moviegoing demand: an individual-level cross-sectional approach. Managerial and Decision Economics, 26, 319–330.
Collins, A. , Hand, C. and Linnell, M. (2008) Analyzing repeat consumption of identical cultural goods: some exploratory evidence from moviegoing. Journal of Cultural Economics, 32, 187–199.
Connell, J. (2012) Film tourism-evolution, progress and prospects. Tourism Management, 33 (5), 1007–1029.
Cook, P. (1979/1980) Star signs. Screen, 20 (3/4), 80–88.
Cooper-Martin, E. (1991) Consumers and movies: some findings on experiential products. Advances in Consumer Research, 12, 372–378.
Corcoran, S. (2009) Defining earned, owned and paid media. Forrester, 16 December. Available at http://blogs.forrester.com/interactive_marketing/2009/12/defining-earned-owned-and-paid-media.html (accessed 30 May 2016).
Corliss, R. (2009) Box-office weekend: Brüno a one-day wonder? TIME, 13 July 2009. Available at http://content.time.com/time/arts/article/0,8599,1910059,00.html (accessed 30 May 2016).
Cowles, D.L. (1997) The role of trust in customer relationships: asking the right questions. Management Decision, 35 (4), 273–284.
Craig, C.S. , Douglas, S.P. and Bennett, A. (2009) Contextual and cultural factors underlying Americanization. International Marketing Review, 26 (1), 90–109.
Craig, C.S. , Greene, W.H. and Versaci, A. (2015) E-word of mouth: early predictor of audience engagement. Journal of Advertising Research, 55 (1), 62–72.
Crawford, D.W. , Jackson, E.L. and Godbey, G. (1991) A hierarchical model of leisure constraints. Leisure Sciences, 13 (4), 309–320.
Crofts, S. (1998) Concepts of national cinema. In: Hill J. and Gibson P.C. (eds.), The Oxford Guide to Film Studies. Oxford University Press: Oxford, pp. 385–394.
Csikszentmihályi, M. (1990) Flow: The Psychology of Optimal Performance. Cambridge University Press: New York, NY.
Cuadrado, M. , Filimon, N. , Kerrigan, F. and Rurale, A. (2013) Exploring cinema attendance facilitators and constraints: a marketing research approach. 5th Workshop on Cultural Economics and Management, Cadiz, Spain.
Culliton, J.W. (1948) The Management of Marketing Costs. Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University: Boston, MA.
Currall, S. and Judge, T. (1995) Measuring trust between organizational boundary role persons. Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, 64, 151–170.
Czepiel, J.A. (1974) Word-of-mouth processes in the diffusion of a major technological innovation. Journal of Marketing Research, 11 (2), 172–180. d'Astous, A. (1999) A study of individual factors explaining movie-goers' consultation of film critics. European Advances in Consumer Research, 4, 201–207. d'Astous, A. and Colbert, F. (2002) Moviegoers' consultation of critical reviews: psychological antecedents and consequences. International Journal of Arts Management, 5 (1), 24–35.
d'Astous, A. and Touil, N. (1999) Consumer evaluations of movies on the basis of critics' judgments. Psychology and Marketing, 16 (8), 677–694.

Dale, M. (1997) The Movie Game: The Film Business in Britain, Europe and America. Cassell: London.
Darade, P. (2015) Highest paid actors in Tollywood. The Times of India, 25 August. Available at http://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/entertainment/telugu/movies/Highest-paid-actors-in-Tollywood/Highest-paid-actors-in-Tollywood/photostory/48668711.cms (accessed 2 May 2016).
De Silva, L. (1998) Consumer selection of motion pictures. In: Litman B.R. (ed.), The Motion Picture Mega-Industry. Allyn and Bacon: Needham Heights, MA, pp. 144–171.
De Vany, A.S. (2004) Hollywood Economics: How Extreme Uncertainty Shapes the Film Industry. Routledge: London.
De Vany, A.S. and Walls, W.D. (1996) Bose–Einstein dynamics and adaptive contracting in the motion picture industry. The Economic Journal, 106 (439), 1493–1514.
De Vany, A.S. and Walls, W.D. (1999) Uncertainty in the movie industry: does star power reduce the terror of the box office? Journal of Cultural Economics, 23 (4), 285–318.
De Vany, A.S. and Walls, W.D. (2004) Motion picture profit, the stable Paretian hypothesis, and the curse of the superstar. Journal of Economic Dynamics and Control, 28 (6), 1035–1057.
De Vany, A.S. and Walls, W.D. (2007) Estimating the effects of movie piracy on box-office revenue. Review of Industrial Organization, 30, 291–301.
DeCordova, R. (1985) The emergence of the star system in America. Wide Angle, 6 (4), 4–13.
DeCordova, R. (1990) Picture Personalities: The Emergence of the Star System in America. University of Illinois Press: Champaign, IL.
Deleyto, C. and López, G. (2012) Catalan beauty and the transnational beast: Barcelona on the screen. Transnational Cinemas, 3 (2), 157–175.
Dellarocas, C. (2003) The digitization of word of mouth: promise and challenges of online feedback mechanisms. Management Science, 49, 1407–1424.
Dellarocas, C.N. , Neveen, F.A. and Zhang, X. (2007) Exploring the value of online product reviews in forecasting sales: the case of motion pictures. Journal of Interactive Marketing, 21 (4), 23–45.
Dena, C. (2011) Do you have a big stick? if:book Australia, 2 August. Available at www.futureofthebook.org.au/news/2011/02/do-you-have-a-big-stick (accessed 10 May 2016).
Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) and Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (BBER) (2009) Digital Britain: The Interim Report. DCMS/BBER: London.
Deuchert, E. , Adjamah, K. and Pauly, F. (2005) For Oscar glory or Oscar money? Journal of Cultural Economics, 29, 159–176.
DiMaggio, P.J. and Powell, W.W. (1983) The iron cage revisited: institutional isomorphism and collective rationality in organizational fields. American Sociological Review, 48, 147–160.
Dixon, W.W. (2016) Hollywood In Crisis Or: The Collapse of the Real. Springer International: Switzerland.
Dodds, J.C. and Holbrook, M.B. (1988) What's an Oscar worth? An empirical estimation of the effects of nominations and awards on movie distribution and revenues. In: Austin B.A. (ed.), Current Research in Film: Audiences, Economics and Law. Vol. 4. Ablex: New York, NY, pp. 72–88.
Doğan, P. (2012) The production and reception of titles for Hollywood film imports in Turkey. Unpublished MA Thesis, Boğaziçi University, Istanbul.
Drucker, P.F. (1954) The Practice of Management. Harper & Row: New York, NY.
Drummond, J. (2000) Tainted by Experience. Faber and Faber: London.
du Gay, P. , Hall, S. , James, L. and Mackay, H. (2000) Doing Cultural Studies: The Story of the Sony Walkman. Sage Publications: London.
Durie, J. (1993) The Film Marketing Handbook: A Practical Guide to Marketing Strategies for Independent Films. MEDIA Business School: Madrid.
Durie, J. , Pham, A. and Watson, N. (2000) Marketing and Selling Your Film Around the World. Silman-James Press: Los Angeles, CA.
Dyer, R. (2007) Stars. British Film Institute: London.
Dyer McCann, R. (1987) The First Tycoons. Scarecrow Press: New York, NY.
Eberts, J. and Ilott, T. (1990) My Indecision is Final, the Rise and Fall of Goldcrest Films. Faber and Faber: London, UK.
Ebewo, P.J. (2007) The emerging video film industry in Nigeria: challenges and prospects. Journal of Film and Video, 59 (3), 46–47.
Eggers, D. (2013) A Hologram for the King. McSweeney's Books: San Francisco, CA.
Elberse, A. (1999) International marketing of motion pictures: an analysis of adoption patterns in the US and the UK. Working Paper, Centre for Marketing, London Business School.
Elberse, A. and Eliashberg, J. (2003) Demand and supply dynamics for sequentially released products in international markets: the case of motion pictures. Marketing Science, 22 (3), 329–354.
Eliashberg, J. and Sawhney, M.B. (1994) Modeling goes to Hollywood: predicting individual differences in movie enjoyment. Management Science, 40 (9), 1151–1173.
Eliashberg, J. and Shugan, S.M. , (1997) Film critics: influencers or predictors? Journal of Marketing, 61, 68–78.

Eliashberg, J. , Hui, S.K. and Zhang, J. (2007) From story line to B box office: a new approach for green-lighting movie scripts. Management Science, 53 (6), 881–893.
Eliashberg, J. , Hui, S.K. and Zhang, J. (2014) Assessing box office performance using movie scripts: a kernel-based approach. IEEE Transactions on Knowledge and Data Engineering, 26 (11), 2639–2648.
Eliashberg, J. , Jonker, J.J. , Sawhney, M.S. and Wierenga, B. (2000) MOVIEMOD: an implementable decision support system for pre-release market evaluation of motion pictures. Marketing Science, 19 (3), 226–243.
Elliott, R. and Hamilton, E. (1991) Consumer choice tactics and leisure activities. International Journal of Advertising, 10, 325–332.
Ellis, J.C. (1995) A History of Film. 4th edn. Allyn and Bacon: Boston, MA.
Engeström, J. (2005) Why some social network services work and others don't – Or: the case for object-centered sociality. Available at www.zengestrom.com/blog/2005/04/why-some-social-network-services-work-and-others-dont-or-the-case-for-object-centered-sociality.html (accessed 20 November 2016).
Esan, O. (2008) Appreciating Nollywood: audiences and Nigerian 'films'. Participations, 5 (1). Available at www.participations.org/Volume%205/Issue%201%20-%20special/5_01_esan.htm (accessed 11 April 2009).
Esparza, N. and Rossman, G. (2006) I'd like to thank the Academy, complementary productivity and social networks. California Center for Population Research On-Line Working Paper Series, University of California, LA.
European Audiovisual Observatory (EAO) (2016) Press release – Box office hit record high in the European Union in 2015. Available at www.obs.coe.int/en/-/cannes-2016-cinema-market-trends (accessed 20 May 2016).
Evans, R. (2003) The Kid Stays in the Picture. 2nd edn. Faber and Faber: London.
Fellman, D.R. (2006) Theatrical distribution. In: Squire J.E. (ed.), The Movie Business Book. (International 3rd edn.). McGraw-Hill: Maidenhead, UK, pp. 362–374.
Felton, A.P. (1959) Making the marketing concept work. Harvard Business Review, 37, 55–65. July/August.
Fillis, I. (2004) Visual arts marketing. In: Kerrigan F. , Fraser P. and Özbilgin M.F. (eds.), Arts Marketing. Elsevier: Oxford.
Fillis, I. (2006) Art for art's sake or art for business sake: an exploration of artistic product orientation. The Marketing Review, 6 (1), 29–40.
Finney, A. (1996) The State of European Cinema, a New Dose of Reality. Cassell: London.
Finney, A. (1998) The Egos Have Landed. The Rise and Fall of Palace Pictures. Arrow: London.
Finney, A. (2015) The International Film Business: A Market Guide Beyond Hollywood. Routledge: Abingdon, UK.
Finney, A. and Triana, E. (2015) The International Film Business: A Market Guide Beyond Hollywood. 2nd edn. Routledge: Abingdon, UK.
Finsterwalder, J. , Kuppelwieser, V.G. and de Villiers, M. (2012) The effects of film trailers on shaping consumer expectations in the entertainment industry – a qualitative analysis. Journal of Retailing and Consumer Services, 19 (6), 589–595.
Fischoff, S. (1998) Favorite film choices: influences of the beholder and the beheld. Journal of Media Psychology, 3 (4), 1–9.
Fishbein, M. and Ajzen, I. (1975) Attitude, Intention and Behavior. Addison-Wesley: Reading UK.
Fiske, J. (1982) Introduction to Communication Studies. Routledge: London.
Follows, S. (2014a) Gender in the film industry. Stephen Follows.com, January. Available at http://stephenfollows.com/reports/Gender_in_the_Film_Industry_StephenFollows.pdf (accessed 20 February 2016).
Follows, S. (2014b) What are average film distribution fees? Stephen Follows.com, 8 March. Available at https://stephenfollows.com/average-film-distribution-fees/ (accessed 3 January 2016).
Follows, S. (2015a) How many films are made around the world? Stephen Follows.com, 5 October. Available at https://stephenfollows.com/how-many-films-are-made-around-the-world/ (accessed 30 March 2016).
Follows, S. (2015b) How much do Hollywood campaigns for an Oscar cost? Stephen Follows.com, 12 January. Available at https://stephenfollows.com/much-hollywood-campaigns-oscar-cost (accessed 20 February 2016).
Ford, R. (2015) How Straight Outta Compton viral marketing became a sensation. The Hollywood Reporter, 14 August. Available at www.hollywoodreporter.com/news/how-straight-outta-compton-viral-815390 (accessed 20 June 2016).
Fournier, S. (1998) Consumers and their brands: developing relationship theory in consumer research. Journal of Consumer Research, 24 (March), 343–374.
Freeman, R.E. (1984) Strategic Management: A Stakeholder Approach. Pitman: Boston, MA.
Garbarino, E. and Johnson, M. (1999) The different roles of satisfaction, trust and commitment in customer relationships. Journal of Marketing, 63, 70–94.
Garver, M.S. and Min, S. (2001) The dynamic role of the sales function in supply chain management. In: Mentzer J.T. (ed.), Supply Chain Management. Sage Publications: Thousand Oaks, CA.
Goldberg, F. (1991) Motion Picture Marketing and Distribution. Focal Press: Boston/London.
Goldman, W. (1983) Adventures in the Screentrade. Warner Books: Los Angeles, CA.
Gomery, D. (1991) Movie History: A Survey. Wadsworth: Belmont, CA.
Goodridge, M. (1995) A dead cert? Marketing Business Journal, November.

Gore, C. (2004) The Ultimate Film Festival Survival Guide. 3rd edn. (2004) Lone Eagle: Los Angeles, CA.
Graham, G. and Hill, J. (2009) The British newspaper industry supply chain in the digital age. Prometheus, 27 (2), 117–124.
Grainge, P. and Johnson, C. (2015) Promotional Screen Industries. Routledge: London.
Granados, N. (2015) Changes to Hollywood release windows are coming fast and furious. Forbes.com, 8 April. Available at www.forbes.com/sites/nelsongranados/2015/04/08/changes-to-hollywood-release-windows-are-coming-fast-and-furious/#396091fb5e5f (accessed 20 November 2016).
Granitz, N. and Forman, H. (2015) Building self-brand connections: exploring brand stories through a transmedia perspective. Journal of Brand Management, 22 (1), 38–59.
Gritten, D. (1998) They're not just 'bean' counters. The British film company has found that success lies in variety. Los Angeles Times, 24 February. Available at http://articles.latimes.com/1998/feb/24/entertainment/ca-22308 (accessed 14 November).
Grobar, M. (2015) 'Carol' D.P. Edward Lachman on shooting 'soiled, soft world' of 1950s for longtime collaborator Todd Haynes – AwardsLine. Deadline.com, 30 December. Available at http://deadline.com/2015/12/edward-lachman-carol-cinematographer-interview-oscars-1201653360/ (accessed 30 May 2016).
Grönroos, C. (1994) Quo vadis, marketing? Toward a relationship marketing paradigm. Journal of Marketing, Management 10 (5), 347–360.
Grönroos, C. (1995) Relationship marketing: the strategy continuum. Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, 23 (Fall), 252–254.
Grönroos, C. (1997) From marketing mix to relationship marketing – towards a paradigm shift in marketing. Management Decision, 35 (3–4), 322–340.
Gupta, P.B. and Lord, K. (1998) Product placement in movies: the effect of prominence and mode on audience recall. Journal of Current Issues and Research in Advertising, 20 (10), 47–59.
Gwinner, K. , Gremler, D. and Bitner, M. (1998) Relational benefits in service industries: the customer's perspective. Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, 26, 101–114.
Hackley, C. and Tiwsakul, R. (2006) Entertainment marketing and experiential consumption. Journal of Marketing Communications, 12 (1), 63–75.
Hadida, A.L. (2009) Motion picture performance: a review and research agenda. International Journal of Management Reviews, 11, 297–335.
Hall, S. (1997) Representation: Cultural Representations and Signifying Practices. Sage Publications: Thousand Oaks, CA.
Hall, T. (1991) Bringing New Product to Market. Amacon: New York, NY.
Hanks, T. (2016) Interview with Tom Hanks. Kermode and Mayo Film Review, 20 May 2016 .
Hargreaves, D.J. and North, A.C. (1997) The Social Psychology of Music. Oxford University Press: Oxford.
Hart, A. , Kerrigan, F. and vom Lehn, D. (2016) Experiencing film: subjective personal introspection and popular film consumption. International Journal of Research in Marketing, 33 (2), 375–391.
Haynes, J. and Okome, O. (1998) Evolving popular media: Nigerian video films. Research in African Literatures 29 (33), 106–128.
Hennig-Thurau, T. , Gwinner, K. , Walsh, G. and Gremler, D.D. (2004) Electronic word-of-mouth via consumer-opinion platforms: what motivates consumers to articulate themselves on the internet. Journal of Interactive Marketing, 18 (1), 38–52.
Hennig-Thurau, T. , Houston, M.B. and Walsh, G. (2006) The differing roles of success drivers across sequential channels: an application to the motion-picture industry. Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, 34 (Fall), 559–575.
Hennig-Thurau, T. , Walsh, G. and Wruck, O. (2001) An investigation into the factors determining the success of service innovations: the case of motion pictures. Academy of Marketing Science Review, 2001 (6). Available at www.marketingcenter.de/lmm/research/publications/download/I6_Hennig-Thurau_Walsh_Wruck_AMSR_2001.pdf (accessed 23 November 2016).
Hennig-Thurau, T. , Wiertz, C. and Feldhaus, F. (2015) Does Twitter matter? The impact of microblogging word of mouth on consumers' adoption of new movies. Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, 43 (3), 375–394.
Herman, G. and Leyens, J.-P. (1977) Rating films on TV. Journal of Communication, 27 (4), 48–53.
Hesmondhalgh, D. (2007) The Cultural Industries. 2nd edn. Sage Publications: London.
Hickey, W. (2016) Men are sabotaging the online reviews of TV shows aimed at women. FiveThirtyEight, 18 May. Available at http://fivethirtyeight.com/features/men-are-sabotaging-the-online-reviews-of-tv-shows-aimed-at-women/ (accessed 30 May 2016).
Higgins, C. (2005) The producers. The Guardian, 16 April.
Hirschman, E.C. (1991) Secular morality and the dark side of consumer behavior: or how semiotics saved my life. In: Holman R.H. and Solomon M.R. (eds.), Advances in Consumer Research. Vol. 18 (1991) Association for Consumer Research: Provo, UT, pp. 1–6.
Hoffman, C. (2013) Made in America: urban immigrant spaces in transnational Nollywood films. In: Krings M. and Okome O. (eds.), Global Nollywood: The Transnational Dimensions of an African Video Film Industry. Indiana University Press: Bloomington, IN, 353–368.

Holbrook, M.B. (1999) Popular appeal versus expert judgements of motion pictures. Journal of Consumer Research, 26 (2), 144–155.
Holbrook, M.B. and Addis, M. (2008) Art versus commerce in the movie industry: a two-path model of motion-picture success. Journal of Cultural Economics, 32, 87–107.
Holbrook, M.B. and Grayson, M.W. (1986) The semiology of cinematic consumption: symbolic consumer behavior in Out of Africa . Journal of Consumer Research, 13 (3), 374–381.
Holbrook, M.B. and Hirschman, E.C. (1982) The experiential aspects of consumption: consumer fantasies, feelings, and fun. Journal of Consumer Research, 9 (2), 132–140.
Holden, A. (1993) The Oscars. The Secret History of Hollywood's Academy Awards. Little Brown and Co: London.
Holliday, C. (2013) Footage not included: Pixar Animation Studios, teaser trailers and the pleasurable absence of content. Title, Teasers and Trailers Conference, 22–23 April, University of Edinburgh, UK.
Holmes, J.H. and Lett, J.D. (1977) Product sampling and word of mouth. Journal of Advertising Research, 17 (October), 35–40.
Holt, D.B. (2002) Why do brands cause trouble? A dialectical theory of consumer culture and branding. Journal of Consumer Research, 29 (1), 70–90.
Howe, C. (2008) Crowdsourcing: Why the Power of the Crowd is Driving the Future of Business. Crown Business: London.
Hsu, G. (2006) Jacks of all trades and masters of none: audiences' reactions to spanning genres in feature film production. Administrative Science Quarterly, 51, 420–450.
Hudson, S. and Hudson, G. (2006) Branded entertainment: a new advertising technique or product placement in disguise? Journal of Marketing Management, 22, 489–504.
Huettig, M.D. (1944) Economic Control of the Motion Picture Industry. University of Pennsylvania Press: Philadelphia, PA.
Hunt, T. (2009) The Whuffie Factor. Using the Power of Social Networks to Build Your Business. Crown Business: London.
Iansiti, M. and MacCormack, A. (1997) Developing products on Internet time. Harvard Business Review, 75 (September/October), 108–117.
Ilhan, B.E. (2011) Transmedia consumption experiences: consuming and co-creating interrelated stories across media. Unpublished PhD thesis, University of Illinois. Available at www.ideals.illinois.edu/handle/2142/26398 (accessed 10 May 2016).
Ilott, T. (1996) Budgets and Markets: A Study of the Budgeting of European Film. Routledge: London.
IMDb (n.d.) Straight Outta Compton. Available at www.imdb.com/title/tt1398426/?ref_=nv_sr_1 (accessed 20 June 2016).
Indiegogo.com (n.d.) Jimmy Vestvood, Amerikan Hero. Available at www.indiegogo.com/projects/jimmy-vestvood-amerikan-hero#/ (accessed 12 June 2016).
InStyle (2012) Mulberry's short film Skirt for Film InStyle has scooped the top honour at the Vimeo awards! InStyle.co.uk, 8 June. Available at www.instyle.co.uk/fashion/news/mulberrys-fashion-short-for-film-instyle-wins-at-the-vimeo-awards (accessed 20 November 2016).
International Union of Cinemas (2016) CinemaCon 2016: UNIC report highlights continuing importance of European cinema sector to global film industry. UNIC Press Release, 11 April. Available at: www.unic-cinemas.org/2016/04/cinemacon-2016-unic-report-highlights-continuing-importance-of-european-cinema-sector-to-global-film-industry/ (accessed 15 May 2016).
Iordanova, D. (2010) Mediating diaspora: film festivals and 'imagined communities'. In: Iordanova D. and Cheung R. (eds.), Film Festival Yearbook 2: Film Festivals and Imagined Communities. St Andrews Film Studies: St Andrews, UK, pp. 12–44.
Iwashita, C. (2003) Media construction of Britain as a destination for Japanese tourists: social constructionism and tourism. Tourism and Hospitality Research, 4 (4), 331–340.
Jacobs, R.S. , Heuvelman, A. , ben Allouch, S. and Peters, O. (2015) Everyone's a critic: the power of expert and consumer reviews to shape readers' post-viewing motion picture evaluations. Poetics, 52, 91–103.
Jancovich, M. (2001) Genre and the audience: genre classifications and cultural distinctions in the mediation of the Silence of the Lambs . In: Jancovich M. (ed.), Horror, The Film Reader. Routledge: London, pp. 151–162.
Jedidi, K. , Krider, R.E. and Weinberg, C.B. (1998) Clustering at the movies. Marketing Letters, 9 (4), 393–405.
Jedlowski, A. (2013) From Nollywood to Nollyworld: processes of transnationalization in the Nigerian video film industry. In: Krings M. and Okome O. (eds.), Global Nollywood: The Transnational Dimensions of an African Video Film Industry. Indiana University Press: Bloomington, IN, pp. 25–45.
Jenkins, H. (2003) Transmedia storytelling. Moving characters from books to films to video games can make them stronger and more compelling. MIT Technology Review, January 2015. Available at www.technologyreview.com/s/401760/transmedia-storytelling/ (accessed 2 May 2016).
Jenkins, H. (2006) Convergence Culture: Where Old and New Media Collide. New York University Press: New York, NY and London.

Jenkins, H. (2009) District 9 (Part One): Can a bench be a transmedia extension? Confessions of an Aca-Fan. The Official Weblog of Henry Jenkins, 25 August. Available at http://henryjenkins.org/2009/08/district_9.html (accessed 12 June 2016).
Jenkins, H. , Ford, S. and Green, J. (2013) Spreadable Media: Creating Value and Meaning in a Networked Culture. New York University Press: New York, NY and London.
Jin, D.Y. (2006) Cultural politics in Korea's contemporary films under neoliberal globalization. Media, Culture and Society, 28 (1), 5–23.
Joeckel, S. (2003) Contemporary Austrian and Irish Cinema. Edition 451: Stuttgart.
Johnston, K.M. (2008) 'The coolest way to watch movie trailers in the world': trailers in the digital world. Convergence: The International Journal of Research into New Media Technologies, 14 (2), 145–160.
Johnstone, E. and Dodd, C. (2000) Placements as mediators of brand salience within a UK cinema audience. Journal of Marketing Communications, 6 (3), 141–158.
Jones, C. and DeFillippi, R.J. (1996) Back to the future in film: combining industry and self-knowledge to meet career challenges of the 21st century. Academy of Management Executive, 10(4), 89–103.
Jones, H.E. and Conrad, H.S. (1930) Rural preferences in motion pictures. Journal of Social Psychology, 1, 419–423.
Jones, J.M. and Ritz, C.J. (1991) Incorporating distribution into new product diffusion models. International Journal of Research in Marketing, 8, 91–112.
Jones, K. (1998) What's the Story: British Film. London Film Festival.
Jordan, N. (1997) Public interview at Galway Arts Festival, Galway.
Jowett, G.S. (1985) Giving them what they want: movie audience research before 1950. Current Research in Film: Audiences, Economics and Law, 1, 19–35.
Kagan, N. (2000) The Cinema of Stanley Kubrick. 3rd edn. (2000) Continuum International Publishing Group: New York, NY.
Karrh, J.A. (1998) Brand placement: a review. Journal of Current Issues & Research in Advertising, 20 (2), 31–49.
Karrh, J.A. , Frith, K. and Callison, C. (2001) Audience attitudes towards brand (product) placement: Singapore and the United States. International Journal of Advertising, 20 (1), 3–24.
Karrh, J.A. , McKee, K.B. and Pardun, C.J. (2003) Practitioners' evolving views on product placement effectiveness. Journal of Advertising Research, 43 (2), 138–149.
Katz-Gerro, T. and Shavit, Y. (1998) The stratification of leisure and taste: classes and lifestyles in Israel. European Sociological Review, 14 (4), 369–386.
Katz, E. and Lazarsfeld, P.E. (1955) Personal Influence: The Part Played by People in the Flow of Mass Communication. Free Press: Glencoe, IL.
Kay, J. (2008) What Jimmy Greaves can teach us about the Toronto Film Festival. The Guardian, 16 September. Available at www.theguardian.com/film/2008/sep/16/toronto.studios (accessed 23 November 2016).
Kenney, R.W. and Klein, B. (1983) The economics of block booking. Journal of Economics and Law, 26 (3), 497–540.
Kermodeandmayo (2014) James King reviews Lilting . YouTube. Available at www.youtube.com/watch?v=Cg4tEat_Hb4 (accessed 15 June 2016).
Kernan, L. (2004) Coming Attractions: Reading American Movie Trailers. University of Texas Press.
Kerrigan, F. (2004) Marketing in the film industry. In: Kerrigan F. , Fraser P. and Özbilgin M.F. (eds.), Arts Marketing. Elsevier: Oxford, pp. 26–41.
Kerrigan, F. (2005) Evaluating the impact of an integrated supply chain on the process of marketing European feature films. Unpublished PhD thesis, University of Hertfordshire Business School.
Kerrigan, F. (2017) Marketing American Indie in the shadow of Hollywood. In: King G. (ed.), A Companion to American Indie Film. Blackwell: Oxford.
Kerrigan, F. and Culkin, N. (1999) A reflection on the American domination of the film industry: an historical and industrial perspective. University of Hertfordshire Business School Working Paper Series 15.
Kerrigan, F. and Özbilgin, M.F. (2002) Art for the masses or art for the few? Ethical issues in film marketing in the UK. Journal of Non-profit and Voluntary Sector Marketing, 7 (3), 195–203.
Kerrigan, F. and Özbilgin, M.F. (2003) Film marketing in Europe – policy and practice. AIMAC Conference, 29 June–2 July, Boconni University, Milan.
Kerrigan, F. and Özbilgin, M.F. (2004) Film marketing in Europe – bridging the gap between policy and practice. International Journal of Non-Profit and Voluntary Sector Marketing, 9 (3), 229–237.
Kerrigan, F. and Yalkin, C. (2009) Revisiting the role of critical reviews in film marketing. In: Hemmungs Wirtén E. and Ryman M. (eds.), Mashing-Up Culture: The Rise of User-Generated Content. Proceedings from the COUNTER Workshop Mashing-Up Culture, 13–14 May, Uppsala University, pp. 162–179.
Kerrigan, F. , Brownlie, D. , Hewer, P. and Jones, P. (2014) Picturing the nation: the role of public funding for film in shaping visions of the nation. 39th Annual Macromarketing Conference, July 2014, Royal Holloway, University of London, Egham.
Kerrigan, F. , Filamon, N. and Cuadrado, M. (2013) Understanding film consumption in the UK and Ireland. 13th International Colloquium on Arts, Heritage, Non-Profit and Social Marketing, 3 September 2013, University of Birmingham, UK.

Kerrigan, F. , Shivanandan, J. and Hede, A.M. (2012) Nation branding: a critical appraisal of incredible India. Journal of Macromarketing, 32 (4), 319–327.
Khandelwal, S. (2016) The Pirate Bay loses its main domain name in court battle. The Hacker News.com, 13 May. Available at http://thehackernews.com/2016/05/pirate-bay-torrent-website.html (accessed 20 November 2016).
Kickstarter (n.d.) 3rd Street Blackout. Available at www.kickstarter.com/projects/blackoutfilm/3rd-street-blackout/description (accessed 10 June 2016).
Kickstarter (n.d.) The Veronica Mars movie project. Available at www.kickstarter.com/projects/559914737/the-veronica-mars-movie-project (accessed 10 June 2016).
Kietzmann, J.H. , Hermkens, K. , McCarthy, I.P. and Silvestre, B.S. (2011) Social media? Get serious! Understanding the functional building blocks of social media. Business Horizons, 54 (3), 241–251.
Kim, E.M. (2004) Market competition and cultural intentions between Hollywood and the Korean film industry. International Journal on Media Management, 6 (3–4), 207–216.
Kim, H.J. , Chen, M.H. and Su, H.J. (2009) The impact of Korean TV dramas on Taiwanese tourism demand for Korea. Tourism Economics, 15 (4), 867–873.
Kim, S. (1998) Cine-mania or cinephilia: film festivals and the identity question. UTS Review (now Cultural Studies Review), 4 (2), 174–187.
Kindem, G. (1982) Hollywood's movie star system: a historical overview. In: Kindem F. (ed.), The American Movie Industry: The Business of Motion Pictures. Southern Illinois University Press: Carbondale IL, pp. 79–93.
Kindem, G. (ed.) (2000) The International Movie Industry. Southern Illinois University Press: Carbondale, IL.
King, B. (1985) Articulating stardom. Screen, 26 (5), 27–50.
King, G. (2009) Indiewood USA: Where Hollywood Meets Independent Cinema. IB Tauris: London.
King, G. , Molloy, C. and Tzioumakis, Y. (2013) American Independent Cinema: Indie, Indiewood and Beyond. Routledge: Abingdon, UK.
King, J. (2008) Distribution Case Study: Steal this Film . Power to the Pixel Conference, 3 November 2011, London Film Festival, BFI London.
Kirsner, S. (2008) Inventing the Movies: Hollywood's Epic Battle Between Innovation and the Status Quo, from Thomas Edison to Steve Jobs. Createspace: New York, NY.
Kiss, J. (2009) The Pirate Bay trial: guilty verdict. The Guardian, 17 April. Available at www.guardian.co.uk/technology/2009/apr/17/the-pirate-bay-trial-guilty-verdict (accessed 5 May 2009).
Kohli, A.K. and Jaworski, B.J. (1990) Market orientation: the construct, research propositions, and managerial implications. Journal of Marketing, 54 (2), 1–18.
Kotler, P. (2002) Marketing Management: Analysis, Planning, Implementation, and Control. Prentice Hall: Upper Saddle River, NJ.
Kotler, P. and Gertner, D. (2002) Country and brand, product, and beyond: a place marketing and brand management perspective, Brand Management, 9 (4–5), 249–261.
Kottasz, R. (2004) How should charitable organisations motivate young professionals to give philanthropically?. International Journal of Nonprofit and Voluntary Sector Marketing, 9 (1), 9–27.
Kozinets, R.V. (1999) E-tribalised marketing? The strategic implications of virtual communicates of consumption. European Management Journal, 17, 252–264.
Kraaykamp, G. (2003) Literary socialization and reading preferences: effects of parents, the library, and the school. Poetics, 31, 235–257.
Krings, M. and Okome, O. (2013) Global Nollywood, The Transnational Dimensions of an African Video Film Industry. Indiana University Press: Bloomington, IN.
Kuhn, M. (2003) One Hundred Weddings and a Funeral. (2003) Thorogood: London.
Kula, S. (2004) Appraisal of audiovisual records in the documentation of popular culture, collective memory and national identity. 15th International Congress on Archives, Vienna. Available at www.ica.org/en/appraisal-audiovisual-records-documentation-popular-culture-collective-memory-and-national-identity (accessed 23 November 2016).
Kuppuswamy, V. and Bayus, B.L. (2015) Crowdfunding creative ideas: the dynamics of project backers in Kickstarter. UNC Kenan-Flagler Research Paper No. 2013–15. Available at http://dx.doi.org/10.2139/ssrn.2234765 (accessed 23 November 2016).
La Ferle, C. and Edwards, S.M. (2006) Product placement: how brands appear on television. Journal of Advertising, 35 (4), 65–86.
Larsen, G. and George, V. (2006) The social construction of destination image: a New Zealand film example. Creating Images and the Psychology of Marketing Communication, 117.
Lauzen, M.M. (2013) Gender @ the movies: on-line film critics and criticism. Centre for Women in TV and Film, San Diego State University. Available at http://womenintvfilm.sdsu.edu/files/2013_Gender_at_the_Movies_Exec_Summ.pdf (accessed 23 November 2016).
Lazarsfeld, P.F. (1947) Audience research in the movie field. Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences, 254, 160–168.
Lazarsfeld, P.F. and Merton, R.K. (1948) Mass communication, popular taste, and organized social action. In: Schramm W. and Roberts D.F. (eds.), Process and Effects of Mass Communication. University of Illinois Press:

Urbana, IL, pp. 554–578.
Lee, H-w. , (2016) Cannes: competition entry ‘The Handmaiden’ best-selling Korean film of all time. The Hollywood Reporter, 19 May. Available at www.hollywoodreporter.com/news/cannes-competition-entry-handmaiden-best-895683 (accessed 30 May 2016).
Lee, K-h. and Shum, C. (2010) Cultural aspects of marketing. In: Baker M.J. and Saren M. (eds.), Marketing Theory: A Student Text. London: Sage Publications, pp. 165–184.
Leenders, M.A.A.M. and Eliashberg, J. (2011) The antecedents and consequences of restrictive age-based ratings in the global motion picture industry. International Journal of Research in Marketing, 28 (4), 367–377.
Leenders, M.A.A.M. , Gemser, G. and Wijnberg, N.M. (2004) Effects of award competitions on market competition in the motion picture industry. 6th World Media Economics Conference, 12–15 May, Centre d’études sur les médias, Montreal, Canada.
Legoux, R. , Larocque, D. , Laporte, S. , Belmati, S. and Boquet, T. (2015) The effect of critical reviews on exhibitors’ decisions: do reviews affect the survival of a movie on screen?. International Journal of Research in Marketing, 33 (2), 357–374.
Levy, E. (2001) Oscar Fever, the History and Politics of the Academy Award. Continuum: New York, NY.
Lewis, J.D. and Weigert, A. (1985) Trust as a social reality. Social Forces, 63 (4), 967–985.
Lin, L. (2014) Regulators move in on China’s burgeoning ‘micro-films’. Wall Street Journal, 22 January. Available at http://blogs.wsj.com/chinarealtime/2014/01/22/chinas-online-video-industry-faces-test/ (accessed 23 June 2016).
Litman, B.R. (1983) Predicting success of theatrical movies: an empirical study. Journal of Popular Culture, 16 (4), 159–175.
Litman, B.R. (1998) The Motion Picture Mega Industry. Allyn and Bacon: Boston, MA.
Litman, B.R. and Ahn, H. (1998) Predicting financial success of motion pictures. In: Litman B.R. (ed.), The Motion Picture Mega Industry. Allyn and Bacon: Needham Heights, MA.
Litman, B.R. and Kohl, L. (1989) Predicting financial success of motion pictures: the 80s experience. Journal of Media Economics, 2, 35–49.
López-Sintas, J. and García-Álvarez, E. (2006) Patterns of audio-visual consumption: the reflection of objective divisions in class structure. European Sociological Review, 22 (4), 397–411.
Lorenzen, M. and Täube, F.A. (2008) Breakout from Bollywood? The roles of social networks and regulation in the evolution of Indian film industry. Journal of International Management, 14, 286–299.
Loureiro, S.M.C. and de Araújo, A.B. (2015) Negative film plot and tourists’ image and intentions: the case of City of God . Journal of Travel & Tourism Marketing, 32 (4), 352–365.
M dot Strange (2008) The indie filmmaker’s guide to building audiences online. Power to the Pixel: The Cross Media Forum, London. Available at www.powertothepixel.com/events-and-training/pttp-events/london-forum-2008/ (accessed 20 November 2016).
MacNab, G.J. (1993) J. Arthur Rank and the British Film Industry. Routledge: London.
Madichie, N. (2010) The Nigerian movie industry ‘Nollywood’ – a nearly perfect marketing case study. Marketing Intelligence & Planning, 28 (5), 625–649.
Madichie, N. (2011) Marketing Senegal through hip hop – a discourse analysis of Akon’s music & lyrics. Journal of Place Management and Development, 4 (2), 169–197.
Madichie, N. and Ibeh, K. (2006) A commentary on the internationalisation of the Nigerian movie industry. Institute for Small Business and Entrepreneurship (ISBE) Conference, October, Cardiff, UK.
Mahajan, V. , Muller, E. and Wind, J. (2000) New-Product Diffusion Models. Kluwer Academic Publishers: Boston, MA.
Manyin, M.E. (2006) South Korea–US economic relations: cooperation, friction, and prospects for a Free Trade Agreement (FTA). Library of Congress, Congressional Research Service, Washington DC. Available at http://fpc.state.gov/documents/organization/61526.pdf (accessed 3 March 2009).
Manyin, M.E. and Cooper, W.H. (2006) The proposed South Korea–US Free Trade Agreement (KORUSFTA). Library of Congress, Congressional Research Service, Washington DC. Available at www.sice.oas.org/TPD/USA_KOR/Studies/CRSREPORT_e.pdf (accessed 3 March 2009).
Marich, R. (2005) Marketing to Moviegoers. Elsevier: Oxford.
Marich, R. (2013) Marketing to Moviegoers: A Handbook of Strategies and Tactics. 3rd edn. Southern Illinois University Press, Carbondale, IL.
Mathieu, C. and Standvad, S.M. (2008) Is this what we should be comparing when comparing film production regimes? A systematic typological scheme and application. Creative Industries Journal, 1 (2), 171–192.
Mayer, R.C. , Davis, J.H. and Schoorman, F.D. (1995) An integrative model of organizational trust. Academy of Management Review, 20 (3), 709–734.
McCarthy, E. (2016) How Simon Fitzmaurice battled MND to make My Name is Emily . Screendaily, 25 February 2016. Available at www.screendaily.com/news/production/how-simon-fitzmaurice-battled-mnd-to-make-my-name-is-emily/5100791.article (accessed 10 June 2016).
McCarthy, E.J. (1960) Basic Marketing. A Managerial Approach. Richard D. Irwin: Homewood, IL.
McDonald, P. (2013) Hollywood Stardom. Wiley: Malden, MA.

McKechnie, S.A. and Zhou, J. (2003) Product placement in movies: a comparison of Chinese and American consumers' attitudes. International Journal of Advertising, 22, 349–374.
McKnight, H. , Cummings, L. and Chervany, N. (1998) Initial trust formation in new organizational relationships. Academy of Management Review, 23 (3), 473–491.
Mentzer, J.T. , DeWitt, W. , Keebler, J.S. , Min, S. , Nix, N.W. , Smith, C.D. and Zacharia, Z.G. (2001) What is supply chain management? In: Mentzer J.T. (ed.), Supply Chain Management. Sage Publications: Thousand Oaks, CA.
Mentzer, J.T. , Foggin, J.H. and Golicic, S.L. (2000a) The enablers, impediments, and benefits. Supply Chain Management Review, 4 (4), 52–58.
Mentzer, J.T. , Soonhong, M. and Zacharia, Z.G. (2000b) The nature of interfirm partnering in supply chain management. Journal of Retailing, 76 (Winter), 549–568.
Meyers, P.W. and Tucker, F.G. (1989) Defining the roles for logistics during routine and radical technological innovation. Journal of Academy of Marketing Science, 17 (1), 73–82.
Miller, D. (2012) Sundance 2012: The day-and-date success story of Margin Call . The Hollywood Reporter, 18 January. Available at www.hollywoodreporter.com/news/sundance-2012-margin-call-video-on-demand-zach-quinto-283033 (accessed 10 May 2016).
Min, S. (2000) The role of marketing in supply chain management. In: Mentzer J.T. (ed.), Supply Chain Management. Sage Publications: Thousand Oaks, CA.
Mingant, N. (2015) There is no one-shape-fits-all for film: an interview with Michael Williams-Jones. In: Mingant N. , Tirtaine C. and Augros, J. (eds.), Film Marketing into the Twenty-First Century. BFI Palgrave: London, pp. 21–25.
Mollick, E. (2014) The dynamics of crowdfunding: an exploratory study. Journal of Business Venturing, 29 (1), 1–16.
Montal, S. (2006) Film festivals and markets. In: Squire J.E. (ed.), The Movie Business Book. International 3rd edn. McGraw-Hill: Maidenhead, UK, pp. 315–330.
Montgomery, L. (2009) Space to grow: copyright, cultural policy and commercially-focused music in China. Chinese Journal of Cultural Communication, 1 (March), 36–49.
Montgomery, L. and Fitzgerald, B. (2006) Copyright and the creative industries in China. International Journal of Cultural Studies, 9 (3), 407–418.
Moon, S. (2013) 1-18-08: A look back at Cloverfield five years later. whatculture.com. Available at http://whatculture.com/film/1-18-08-a-look-back-at-cloverfield-five-years-later (accessed 10 May 2016).
Moorman, C. , Deshpandé, R. and Zaltman, G. (1993) Factors affecting trust in market research relationships. Journal of Marketing, 57 (August), 81–101.
Moreau, F. and Peltier, S. (2004) Cultural diversity in the movie industry: a cross-national study. Journal of Media Economics, 17 (2), 123–143.
Motion Picture Association of America (2016) Film ratings. Available at www.mpaa.org/film-ratings/ (accessed 16 November 2016).
Moul, C.C. (2007) Measuring word-of-mouth's impact on theatrical movie admissions. Journal of Economics and Management Strategy, 16 (4), 859–892.
Moul, C.C. and Shugan, S.M. (2005) Theatrical release and the launching of motion pictures. In: Moul C.C. (ed.), A Concise Handbook of Movie Industry Economics. Cambridge University Press: New York, NY, pp. 80–137.
Mullally, F. (1946) Films: An Alternative to Rank. An Analysis of Power and Policy in the British Film Industry. Socialist Book Centre: London.
Mulvey, L. (1975) Visual pleasure and narrative cinema. Screen, 16 (3), 6–18.
Muñiz, A.M. and O'Guinn, T.C. (2001) Brand community. Journal of Consumer Research, 27 (4), 412–432.
Murray, J. (2015) Interview with Jarlath Regan. An Irishman Abroad podcast, 14 November. Available at http://anirishmanabroad.podbean.com/e/jenn-murray-episode-113/ (accessed 18 April 2016).
mynameisemilythefilm.com (n.d.) Crowd Funding. Available at www.mynameisemilythefilm.com/#!about/mainPage (accessed 10 June 2016).
Narver, J.C. and Slater, S.F. (1990) The effect of a market orientation on business profitability. Journal of Marketing, 54, 20–35.
Navaie, N.S. (2004) Societal arts marketing: a multi-sectoral, inter-disciplinary and international perspective. In: Kerrigan F. , Fraser P. and Özbilgin M.F. (eds.), Arts Marketing. Elsevier: Oxford, pp. 159–186.
Nayar, P.K. (2009) Seeing Stars, Spectacle, Society and Celebrity Culture. Sage Publications: New Delhi.
Neelamegham, R. and Chintagunta P. (1999) A Bayesian model to forecast new product performance in domestic and international markets. Marketing Science, 18 (2), 115–136.
Nelson, R. , Donihue, M. , Waldman, D. and Wheaton, C. (2001) What's an Oscar worth? Economic Inquiry, 39, 1–16.
Nelson, R.A. , Reid, C. and Gilmore, O. (2007) An analysis of the out-of-market gap for DVDs in the US. Review of Industrial Organization, 30 (4), 303–323.
News18.com (2015) In 2015, Hollywood gave Indian films a run for their money. Available at www.news18.com/news/movies/in-2015-hollywood-gave-indian-films-a-run-for-their-money-1179413.html (accessed 1 May 2016).
Nichols, B. (1994) Discovering form, inferring meaning: new cinemas and the film festival circuit. Film Quarterly, 47 (3), 16–30.

Nikolychuk, L. , Kerrigan, F. and Abbott, P. (2009) UK independent television & film production sectors: exploring new collaborative (business) models. School of Humanities, King's College London. Available at https://kclpure.kcl.ac.uk/portal/files/5048603/Final_report.pdf (accessed 23 November 2016).
Noh, J. (2009) Korean Film Council unveils five-year funding plan. Screendaily. Available at www.screendaily.com/korean-film-council-unveils-five-year-funding-plan/5000888.article (accessed 8 May 2009).
Noh, J. (2016) South Korea box office hits record high in 2015. Screendaily, 3 February. Available at www.screendaily.com/news/south-korea-box-office-hits-record-high-in-2015/5099746.article (accessed 3 March 2016).
Nowell-Smith, G. (1981) Six authors in pursuit of The Searchers . In: Caughie J. (ed.), Theories of Authorship. Routledge and Kegan Paul/British Film Institute: London.
O'Connor, N. , Flanagan, S. and Gilbert, D. (2008) The integration of film induced tourism and destination branding in Yorkshire. International Journal of Tourism Research, 10 (5), 423–437.
O'Connor, N. , Flanagan, S. and Gilbert, D. (2010) A film marketing action plan for film induced tourism destinations – using Yorkshire as a case study. European Journal of Tourism Research, 3 (1), 80–82.
O'Reilly, D. (2004) The marketing of popular music. In: Kerrigan F. , Fraser P. and Özbilgin M.F. (eds.), Arts Marketing. Elsevier: Oxford, pp. 6–25.
O'Reilly, D. and Kerrigan, F. (2010) Marketing the Arts: A Fresh Approach. Routledge: Abingdon, UK.
O'Reilly, D. and Kerrigan, F. (2013) A view to a brand: introducing the film brandscape. European Journal of Marketing, 47 (5/6), 769–789.
O'Reilly, D. and Kerrigan, F. (2016) Arts branding. In: Dall'Olmo Riley F. , Singh J. and Blankson C. (eds.), The Routledge Companion to Contemporary Brand Management. London: Routledge, pp. 448–457.
O'Reilly, D. , Larsen, G. and Kubacki, K. (2013) Music, Markets and Consumption. Goodfellows Publishers: Oxford.
O'Reilly, D. , Rentschler, R. and Kirchner, T. (eds.) (2014) The Routledge Companion to Arts Marketing. London: Routledge.
Obias, R. (2013) 19 Short films that were made into feature-length movies. Mentalfloss, 12 March. Available at http://mentalfloss.com/article/53961/19-short-films-were-made-feature-length-movies (accessed 30 May 2016).
Okome, O. (2007a) Introducing the special issue on West African cinema: Africa at the movies. Postcolonial Test, 3 (2), 1–17.
Okome, O. (2007b) Nollywood: spectatorship, audience and the sites of consumption. Postcolonial Test, 3 (2). Available at http://journals.sfu.ca/pocol/index.php/pct/article/view/763/425 (accessed 12 March 2009).
Olorunyomi, S. (1995) Glendora review. African Quarterly on the Arts, 1 (2), 54–56.
Olsberg SPI and TBR Economics (2006) UK Film Sales Sector Study. UK Film Council: London.
Ortner, S.B. (2013) Not Hollywood: Independent Film at the Twilight of the American Dream. Duke University Press: Durham, NC.
Otterbacher, J. (2013) Gender, writing and ranking in review forums: a case study of the IMDb. Knowledge and Information Systems, 35 (3), 645–664.
Özbilgin, M. and Kerrigan, F. (2002) Educating Rita or Freeing Willy? Academy of Marketing Conference, Nottingham, UK.
PACT/MMC (1994) Factors Influencing the Production, Supply and Exhibition of Independent Films in the UK Market. Bridge Media: London.
Paquet, D. (2005) The Korean film industry: 1992 to the present. In: Shin C.-Y. and Stringer J. (eds.), New Korean Cinema. Edinburgh University Press: Edinburgh, pp. 54–55.
Paquet, D. (2007) A short history of Korean film. Available at http://koreanfilm.org/history.html (accessed 30 May 2016).
Park, S.H. (2002) Film censorship and political legitimation in South Korea, 1987. Cinema Journal, 42 (1), 120–138.
Park, S.H. (2007) Korean cinema after liberation, production, industry and regulatory trends. In: Gateward F.K. (ed.), Seoul Searching: Culture and Identity in Contemporary Korean Cinema. State University of New York Press: New York, NY, pp. 15–36.
Perren, A. , (2001) Sex, lies and marketing: Miramax and the development of the quality indie blockbuster. Film Quarterly, 55 (2), 30–39.
Phillips, J. (1991) You'll Never Eat Lunch in this Town Again. Faber and Faber: London.
Prayag, G. and Hosany, S. (2014) When Middle East meets West: understanding the motives and perceptions of young tourists from United Arab Emirates, Tourism Management, 40, 35–45.
Preece, C. , Kerrigan, F. and O'Reilly, D. (2016) Framing the work: the composition of value in the visual arts. European Journal of Marketing, 50 (7/8), 1–41.
Puttnam, D. (1997) The Undeclared War, the Struggle for Control for the World's Film Industry. Harper Collins: London.
Radbourne, J. (2002) Social intervention or market intervention? A problem for governments in promoting the value of the arts. International Journal of Arts Management, 5 (1), 50–61.
Ravid, S.A. (1999) Information, blockbusters, and stars: a study of the film industry. Journal of Business, 72 (4), 463–492.
Rediff.com (2004) What is the harm if actors take money to campaign? Available at http://in.rediff.com/movies/2004/mar/12stars.htm (accessed 16 November 2016).

Reingen, P.H. , Foster, B.L. , Brown, J.J. and Seidman, S.B. (1984) Brand congruence in interpersonal relations: a social network analysis. Journal of Consumer Research, 11 (3), 771–783.
Rentschler, R. (1999) Innovative Arts Marketing. Allen & Unwin: Crows Nest, Australia.
Rentschler, R. (2004) Museum marketing: understanding different types of audiences. In: Kerrigan F. , Fraser P. and Özbilgin M.F. (eds.), Arts Marketing. Elsevier: Oxford, pp. 139–158.
Rheingold, H. (1994) The Virtual Community: Finding Connection in a Computerized World. Secker & Warburg: London.
Riley, R. , Baker, D. and van Doren, C.S. (1998) Movie-induced tourism. Annals of Tourism Research, 25 (4), 919–935.
Ritman, A. (2015) Meryl Streep slams 'infuriating' gender imbalance among US film critics. The Hollywood Reporter, 7 October. Available at www.hollywoodreporter.com/news/meryl-streep-slams-infuriating-gender-830225 (accessed 1 June 2016).
Rittichainuwat, B. , and Rattanaphinanchai, S. (2015) Applying a mixed method of quantitative and qualitative design in explaining the travel motivation of film tourists in visiting a film-shooting destination. Tourism Management, 46 (February) 136–147.
Robinson, D. (1996) From Peep Show to Palace, the Birth of American Film. Columbia University Press: New York, NY.
Rodanthi, T. (2004) Constructing the 'cinematic tourist': the 'sign industry' of The Lord of the Rings . Tourist Studies 4 (1), 21–42.
Rogers, E.M. (1962) Diffusion of Innovations. The Free Press: New York, NY.
Rosar, W.H. (2002) Film music – what's in a name? Journal of Film Music, 1 (1), 1–18.
Rose, J. (2013) Let me entertain you: the rise of branded entertainment. The Guardian, 26 September. Available at www.theguardian.com/media-network/2013/sep/26/branded-entertainment-content-marketing (accessed 8 October 2014).
Ross, J. (2013) 'No Revolutionary Roads please, we're Turkish': the translation of film titles as an object of translation research. Across Languages and Cultures, 14 (2), http://dx.doi.org/10.1556/ACR.14.2013.2.6.
Russell, C.A. (1998) Toward a framework of product placement: theoretical propositions. In: Alba J.W. and Hutchinson J.W. (eds.), Advances in Consumer Research. Vol. 25. Provo, UT: Association for Consumer Research, pp. 357–362.
Russell, C.A. (2002) Investigating the effectiveness of product placement in television shows: the role of modality and plot connection congruence on brand memory and attitude. Journal of Consumer Research, 29 (4), 306–318.
Said, E.W. (1994) Culture and Imperialism. Vintage Books: New York, NY.
Sawhney, M.S. and Eliashberg, J. (1996) A parsimonious model for forecasting gross box-office revenues of motion pictures. Marketing Science, 15 (2), 113–131.
Schaefer, A. and Kerrigan, F. (2008) Trade Associations and corporate social responsibility: evidence from the UK water and film industries. Business Ethics, A European Review, 17 (2), 171–195.
Schilling, M. (2016) Japan's annual box office climbs by 4% in 2015. Variety, 26 January. Available at http://variety.com/2016/film/asia/japan-box-office-up-4-in-2015-1201688585/ (accessed 23 November 2016).
Schlesinger, L. and Heskett, J. (1991) Breaking the cycle of failure in services. Sloan Management Review, 32 (Spring), 17–28.
Schouten, J.W. and McAlexander, J. (1995) Subcultures of consumption: an ethnography of the new bikers. Journal of Consumer Research, 22 (June), 43–61.
Schroeder, J.E. (2002) Visual Consumption. Routledge: London.
Schwienbacher, A. and Larralde, B. (2012) Crowdfunding of small entrepreneurial ventures. In: Cumming D. (ed.), Oxford Handbook of Entrepreneurial Finance. Oxford University Press: Oxford, pp. 369–391.
Scolari, C.A. (2009) Transmedia storytelling: implicit consumers, narrative worlds, and branding in contemporary media production. International Journal of Communication, 3, 586–606.
Scott, A.J. (2005) On Hollywood, the Place, the Industry. Princeton University Press: Princeton, NJ.
Seagrave, K. (2004) Product Placement in Hollywood films: A History. McFarland and Co: Jefferson, NC.
Sheth, J.N. and Parvatiyar, A. (1995) Relationship marketing in consumer markets: antecedents and consequences. Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, 23 (Fall) 255–271.
Shim, D. (2006) Hybridity and the rise of Korean popular culture in Asia. Media, Culture and Society, 28 (1), 25–44.
Shin, C.-Y. (2005) Globalisation and New Korean cinema. In: Shin C.-Y. and Stringer J. (eds.), New Korean Cinema. Edinburgh University Press: Edinburgh, pp. 54–55.
Shin, C.-Y. and Stringer, J. (2007) Storming the big screen, the Shiri syndrome. In: Gateward F.K. (ed.), Seoul Searching: Culture and Identity in Contemporary Korean Cinema. State University of New York Press: New York, NY, pp. 55–72.
Shopify (n.d.) The Ultimate Guide to Crowdfunding. Available at www.shopify.com/guides/crowdfunding/crowdfunding-infographic (accessed 10 June 2016).
Simmons, W.O. and Emanuele, R. (2007) Male–female giving differentials: are women more altruistic?. Journal of Economic Studies, 34 (6), 534–550.
Simonton, D.K. (2002) Collaborative aesthetics in the feature film: cinematic components predicting the differential impact of 2,323 Oscar-nominated movies. Empirical Studies of the Arts, 20, 115–125.

Simonton, D.K. (2004) Film awards as indicators of cinematic creativity and achievement: a quantitative comparison of the Oscars and six alternatives. Creativity Research Journal 16 (2–3), 163–172.
Singh, A. (2009) Inglourious Basterds a box office hit 'thanks to the Twitter effect'. The Telegraph, 24 August. Available at www.telegraph.co.uk/news/celebritynews/6081711/Inglourious-Basterds-a-box-office-hit-thanks-to-the-Twitter-effect.html (accessed 30 May 2016).
Sniezek, J.A. and Van Swol, L.M. (2001) Trust, confidence and expertise in a judge–advisor system. Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, 84 (2), 288–307.
Sochay, S. (1994) Predicting the performance of motion pictures. Journal of Media Economics, 7 (4), 1–20.
Srinivas, L. (2002) The active audience: spectatorship, social relations and the experience of cinema in India. Media, Culture and Society, 24, 155–173.
Staiger, J. (2005) Media Reception Studies. New York University Press: New York, NY.
Stephen, T. , and Galak, J. (2012) The effects of traditional and social earned media on sales: an application to a microlending marketplace. Journal of Marketing Research, 49, 624–639.
Storper, M. (1989) The transition to flexible specialization: the division of labour, external economies, and the crossing of industrial divides. Cambridge Journal of Economics, 13, 273–305.
Storper, M. and Christopherson, S. (1987) Flexible specialization and regional industrial agglomerations: the case of the US motion-picture industry. Annals of the Association of American Geographers, 77, 260–282.
Stringer, J. (2005) Putting Korean Cinema in its place: genre classifications and the contexts of reception. In: Shin C.-Y. and Stringer J. (eds.), New Korean Cinema. Edinburgh University Press: Edinburgh, UK, pp. 99–105.
Swami, S. , Eliashberg, J. and Weinberg, C.B. (1999) Silverscreener: a modeling approach to movie screens management. Marketing Science, 18 (3), 352–372.
Takhar, A. , Maclaran, P. and Stevens, L. (2012) Bollywood cinema's global reach, consuming the 'diasporic consciousness'. Journal of Macromarketing, 32 (3), 266–279.
The Economist (2007) Endless summer. 28 April. Available at www.economist.com/node/9079888 (accessed 23 November 2016).
The National (2014) In pictures: 10 Bollywood actors turn to politics. Available at www.thenational.ae/arts-culture/film/in-pictures-10-bollywood-actors-turn-to-politics (accessed 16 November 2016).
The Numbers' Bankability Index. Available at www.the-numbers.com/ (accessed on 30 December 2016).
Thompson, C.J. , Rindfleisch, A. and Arsel, Z. (2006) Emotional branding and the strategic value of the Doppelgänger brand image. Journal of Marketing, 70 (January), 50–64.
Thompson, K. and Bordwell, D. (2003) Film History: An Introduction. 2nd edn. McGraw-Hill: New York, NY.
Tiwsakul, R. , Hackley, C. and Szmigin, I. (2005) Explicit, non-integrated product placement in British television programmes. International Journal of Advertising, 24 (1), 95–111.
Torche, F. (2007) Social status and cultural consumption: the case of reading in Chile. Poetics, 35 (2), 70–92.
Travis, R. (1990) The routinization of film criticism. Journal of Popular Culture, 23 (4), 51–65.
Trigonis, J.T. (2013) Crowdfunding for Filmmakers: The Way to a Successful Film Campaign. Michael Wiese Productions: Studio City, CA.
Trumpbour, J. (2002) Selling Hollywood to the World: US and European Struggles for Mastery of the Global Film Industry, 1920–1950. Cambridge University Press: Cambridge, UK.
Tzokas, N. and Saren, M. (1999) Value transformation in relationship marketing. Australasian Marketing Journal, 7 (1), 52–62.
UK Film Council/Stimulating World Research (2007) A Qualitative Study of Avid Cinema-Goers. UK Film Council: London.
Ukadike, N.F. (2002) Questioning African Cinema: Conversations with Filmmakers. University of Minnesota Press: Minneapolis, MN.
Ulff-Møller, J. (2001) Hollywood's Film Wars with France, Film-Trade Diplomacy and the Emergence of the French Film Quota Policy. University of Rochester Press: Rochester, NY.
UNESCO (1980) Recommendation for the Safeguarding and Preservation of Moving Images. UNESCO.org, 27 October. Available at http://portal.unesco.org/en/ev.php-URL_ID=13139&URL_DO=DO_TOPIC&URL_SECTION=201.html (accessed 20 November 2016).
Unwin, E. , Kerrigan, F. , Waite, K. and Grant, D. (2007) Getting the picture: programme awareness amongst film festival customers. International Journal of Nonprofit and Voluntary Sector Marketing 12 (3), 231–245.
Urry, J. (1990) The Tourist Gaze. Sage Publications: London.
van Eijck, K. and van Rees, K. (2000) Media orientation and media use: television viewing behavior of specific reader types from 1975 to 1995. Communication Research, 27, 574–616.
Vargo, S.L. and Lusch, R.F. (2004) Evolving to a new dominant logic for marketing. Journal of Marketing, 68 (1), 1–17.
Vargo, S.L. and Lusch, R.F. (2006) Service-dominant logic: what it is, what it is not, what it might be. In: Lusch R.F. and Vargo S.L. (eds.), The Service-Dominant Logic of Marketing: Dialog, Debate, and Directions. ME Sharpe: New York, NY, pp. 43–56.
Vartiainen, S. (2013) MEDIA: Training and Networks 2013, European training programmes co-financed by MEDIA. 2nd edn. European Commission: Brussels.

Vincendeau, G. (2005) Stars and Stardom in French Cinema. Continuum International Publishing Group: London.
Vogel, H.L. (2006) Entertainment Industry Economics: A Guide for Financial Analysis. 6th edn. Cambridge University Press: Cambridge.
Voss, C. and Zomerdijk, L. (2007) Innovation in Experiential Services: An Empirical View. London Business School and Aim Research: London.
Wallace, W.T. , Seigerman, A. and Holbrook, M.B. (1993) The role of actors and actresses in the success of films: how much is a movie star worth? Journal of Cultural Economics, 17 (1), 1–24.
Ward, A. (2009) UK Film Council search engine for audiences in the digital age. Screendaily, 28 January. Available at www.screendaily.com/uk-film-council-search-engine-for-audiences-in-the-digital-age/4042883.article (accessed 5 May 2009).
Warde, A. (ed.) (2011) Cultural Consumption, Classification and Power. Routledge: London and New York.
Warnaby, G. and Medway, D. (2013) What about the 'place' in place marketing?. Marketing Theory 13 (3), 345–363.
Wasko, J. (1994) Hollywood in the Information Age: Beyond the Silver Screen. Polity Press: Oxford.
Waterman, D. (1987) Electronic media and the economics of the first sale doctrine. In: Thorne R. and Vierra J.D. (eds.), Handbook of Entertainment, Publishing and the Arts. Clark Boardman and Co.: New York, NY, pp. 3–13.
Waterman, D. and Lee, S.C. (2003) Time consistency and the distribution of theatrical films: an empirical study of the video window. Working Paper, Indiana University Department of Telecommunications.
Webb, J. (2009) Understanding Representation. Sage Publications: London.
Westbrook, R.A. (1987) Product/consumption-based effective response and post-purchase processes. Journal of Marketing Research, 24 (3), 258–270.
Whysall, P. (2000) Addressing ethical issues in retailing: a stakeholder perspective. International Review of Retail Distribution and Consumer Research, 10 (3), 305–318.
Williams, C. (2014) Warner Bros creates new Harry Potter team. The Telegraph, 30 July 2014. www.telegraph.co.uk/finance/newsbysector/mediatechnologyandtelecoms/media/11000067/Warner-Bros-creates-new-Harry-Potter-team.html (accessed 10 June 2015).
Wohlfeil, M. and Whelan, S. (2008) Confessions of a movie-fan: introspection into the experiential consumption of 'Pride & Prejudice'. European Advances in Consumer Research, 8, 137–143.
Wong, F.M.F. , Sen, S. and Chiang, M. (2012) Why watching movie tweets won't tell the whole story?. In: Proceedings of the 2012 ACM Workshop on Workshop on Online Social Networks. Association for Computing Machinery, August, 61–66.
Wyatt, J. (1994) High Concept: Movies and Marketing in Hollywood. University of Texas Press: Austin, TX.
Yim, H. (2002) Cultural identity and cultural policy in South Korea. International Journal of Cultural Policy, 8 (1), 37–48.
Zacharia, Z.G. (2000) Research and development in supply chain management. In: Mentzer J.T. (ed.), Supply Chain Management. Sage Publications: Thousand Oaks, CA, pp. 127–154.
Zuckerman, E.W. (1999) The categorical imperative: securities analysts and the illegitimacy discount. American Journal of Sociology, 104 (5), 1398–1438.
Zufryden, F.S. (1996) Linking advertising to box office performance of new film releases: a marketing planning model. Journal of Advertising Research, 36 (4), 29–41.
Zukor, A. (1954) The Public is Never Wrong. Cassell: London.